

March 1979

$1.50

The adult illustrated fantasy magazine

FEAKY WEAKY

IND 36587

03

You've seen the movie! You've read the book! Now you can read the shirts!

photograph by Joey Green

What else? From the National Lampoon, one of the world's great hunters of your loose bucks, comes the T-shirt and the "softball" shirt from the first NatLamp film, National Lampoon's Animal House.

Now you can wear the glorious Animal House softball shirt with half-length sleeves in blushing crimson to go along with the flaming N.L.A.H logo on the front and the statement on the back that gives you complete license to enjoy yourself: "We're college students and we can do anything we want!" And listen, you don't have to be college students to wear the shirt. You can be sixteen or sixty, semiliterate or just a dropout or never-went, like the guy who wrote this adv...who cares. We'll sell you anything.

Made from 100 percent machine washable cotton. $6.00 each in large, medium, or small, plus 60 cents for postage and handling.

Or you, you lucky individual you, can buy and wear the National Lampoon's Animal House Delta shirt with caricatures of Bluto, Otter, Pinto, the entire "unholy seven" who help make Animal House the funniest movie since Getting Gertie's Garter. Comes in flaming orange with black caricatures and red and black lettering or in your basic beige with the same trimmings. On the back is the brilliantly conceived slogan, "It was the Deltas against the rules—the rules lost!" This slogan received first prize at the American Slogan Contest held only this past July in Boise, Idaho, the slogan capital of America.

Made from 100 percent machine washable cotton. $4.95 each in large, medium, or small, plus 60 cents for handling. Make sure to indicate color in addition to small, medium, or large.

National Lampoon, Inc., Dept. HM379

635 Madison Avenue

New York, N.Y. 10022

JOIN THE HOUSE!

Yes, I would like to join the house. Please send me the T-shirts I have checked below.

New York City residents, please add 8% sales tax, New York State residents, please add 6% sales tax.

Animal House Softball shirt at $6.00.

Check small medium large

Animal House Delta shirt at $4.95.

Check small medium large

Indicate orange or beige _____

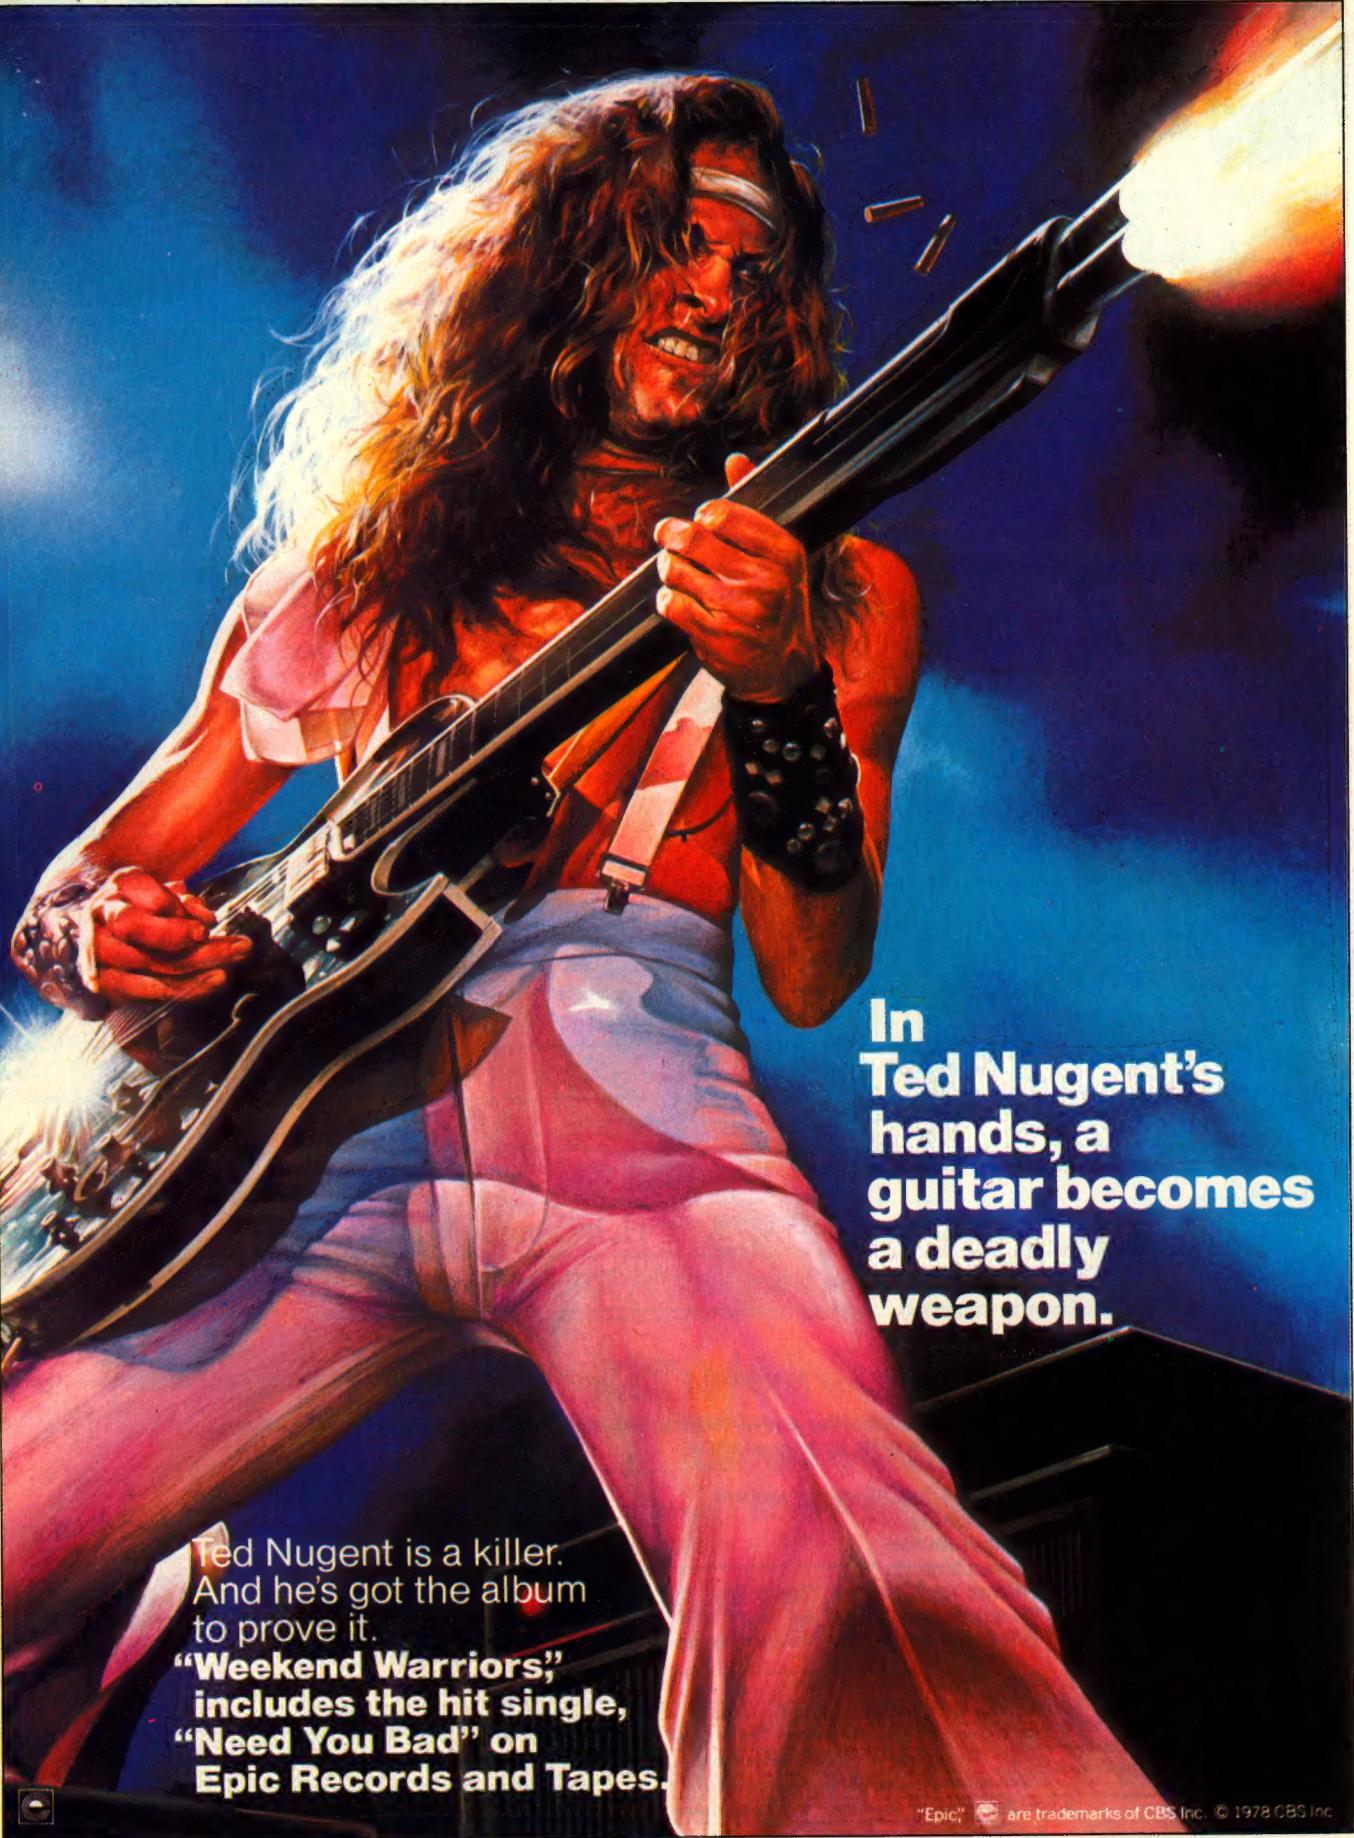

(Please include 60 cents for postage and handling for each shirt.)

Name _____ (please print)

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Produced by Lew Futterman, Cliff Davies and Tom Werman for the Next City Corporation. Direction: David Krebs and Steve Leber for Leber-Krebs, Inc.

In Ted Nugent's hands, a guitar becomes a deadly weapon.

Ted Nugent is a killer.
And he's got the album to prove it.

"Weekend Warriors," includes the hit single,
"Need You Bad" on Epic Records and Tapes.

"Epic" and the CBS eye logo are trademarks of CBS Inc. © 1978 CBS Inc.

CONTENTS

Heavy Metal Vol. II. No. 11 March 1979

New Tales of the Arabian Nights, Sindbad in the Land of Jinn, by Richard Corben and Jan Strnad, 7

The Airtight Garage of Jerry Cornelius, by Moebius, 15

Rastaskoy, by Malskoy, 18

The Stars My Destination: Graphic Story Adaptation, by Alfred Bester and Byron Preiss.
Illustrated by Howard Chaykin, 25

A Mass for the Dead, by Pertuze, 45

Nino, 48

Flopsweat, by Harlan Ellison, Illustration by Tom Barber, 50

The Great Trap #2, by Sire, 54

Blanc and Dumont, 59

Starcrown, by John Pocsik, Gil Kane, and C. Smith, 60

Exterminator 17, by Bilal, 68

Rochberny, 84

So Beautiful and So Dangerous, by Angus McKie, 85

1996, by Montellier, 94

...And another thing..., 4

Chain Mail, 84

Front cover, S*M*A*S*H, by Angus McKie

Back cover, Stargazer, by Robert Morello

Alfred Bester's, The Stars My Destination: Graphic Story Adaptation, © 1978, Byron Preiss Visual Publications, Inc. Original novel copyright © 1953, by Alfred Bester.

"Sindbad in the Land of Jinn," from The New Tales of the Arabian Nights, copyright © 1979, by Richard Corben and Jan Strnad.

"So Beautiful and So Dangerous," copyright © 1979, by Angus McKie.

"Nino," copyright © 1977, by Alex Nino.

"Starcrown," copyright © 1978, Ariel Books, Inc. All rights reserved.

"Rochberny," copyright © 1979, by Rochberny.

"S*M*A*S*H," copyright 1979, by Angus McKie.

"Stargazer," copyright © 1978, by Robert Morello.

"The Airtight Garage of Jerry Cornelius," by Moebius, "Rastaskoy," by Malskoy, "A Mass for the Dead," by Pertuze, "The Great Trap," by Sire, Illustration by Blanc and Dumont, "Exterminator 17," by Bilal, and "1996," by Montellier are all from Metal Hurlant, copyright © 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979. Metal Hurlant is published by L. F. Editions, Les Humanoides Associés, Paris. Reprinted by permission.

Editors: Sean Kelly, Valerie Merchant • Managing Editor: Julie Simmons • Copy Editor: Elise Cagan

Design Director: Peter Kleinman • Art Director: John Workman • Art Assistant: Bill Workman

Production Manager: George Agoglia, Jr. • Advertising Manager: Colin Wight

Circulation Director: George Agoglia, Sr. • Circulation Sales Coordinator: Michael Agoglia

Public Relations and Promotion: Eric Rolfe Greenberg • Foreign Rights Manager: Barbara Sabatino

Publishing Directors: Matty Simmons and Leonard Mogel • Publisher: Richard B. Barthelmes

TOUCH OTHER REALMS WITH STAR REACH COMICS

Drawing on the talents of established "straight" cartoonists like Neil Adams, Frank Brunner, Howie Chaykin, Craig Russell and others, editor Mike Friedrich has produced a series of publications that provide an unrestrained environment for their work. Observe these American masters as they exercise the artistic freedom denied them in the straight press. Thrill to expertly drawn science fiction and fantasy that defies the formula plots and assembly-line art of most American cartooning. These publications are for adults only!

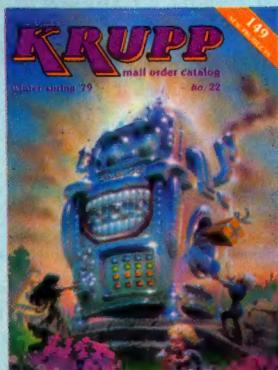

STAR REACH PACKAGE No. 1. Contains issues No. 1 through No. 8. $12.00

STAR REACH PACKAGE No. 2. Contains issues No. 9 through No. 14. $9.00

SPECIAL DEAL

Order every comic on this page PLUS get our giant catalog. A $29.50 value for just $26.00

KRUPP'S NEW CATALOG
Our latest giant catalog contains over 250 titles of underground comix plus pipes, books, notecards, T-shirts, posters and lots more. Over 1,000 products. To get our latest catalog delivered by First Class mail, just send us $1.00, which is refundable with your first order!

Bonus: Order any comix package listed on this page and get the giant catalog FREE!

IMAGINE PACKAGE. Contains Imagine No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3. $4.50

FULL-COLOR PACKAGE. Includes the full-color comix Cody Starbuck and Parsifal. $4.00

- Star Reach Package No. 1 @ $12.00
 Star Reach Package No. 2 @ $9.00
 Imagine Package @ $4.50

- Full Color Package @ $4.00
 Krupp's New Catalog @ $1.00
(free with order)

Special Deal (all comics on page) @ $26.00

Be sure to include 50¢ for postage with each order

Mastercharge VISA accepted

--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

all numbers on your card month year

--	--

signature

expiration date

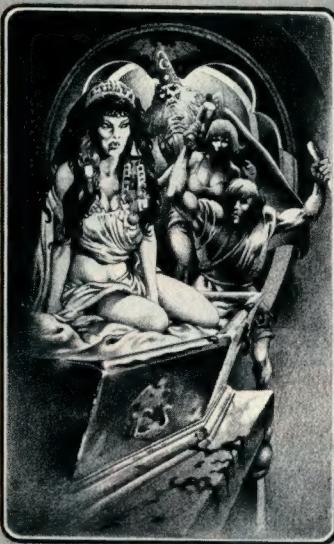

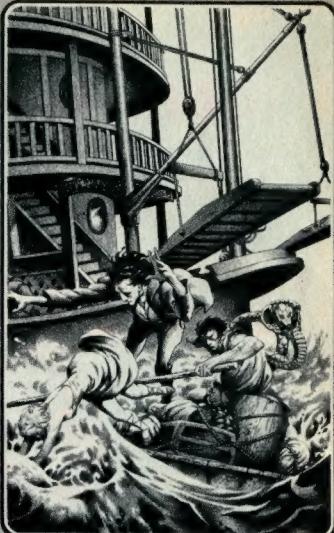

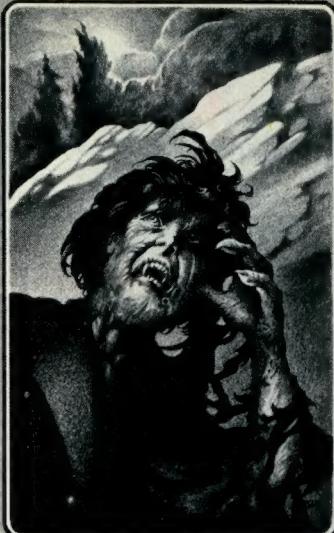

Send to:

KRUPP MAIL ORDER
P.O. Box 9090 Dept. CS-1
Boulder, CO 80301

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

When all twelve moonchunks showed clearly visible, Sam began to regard Reardon intently. Reardon's head lolled against his left shoulder; he might have been sleeping.

The first thing Sam noticed was the fur. Great gray clumps of it began to sprout on Reardon's face. Reardon's mouth formed a narrow crease filled with sharp fangs. His nose was a flat black snout. Deep in his throat he began to growl.

Then he lunged....

HM COMMUNICATIONS, INC., is a subsidiary of Twenty First Century Communications, Inc.

Chairman Matty Simmons

Sr. Vice-President, Circulation George S. Agoglia

Vice President, Finance Charles Schneider

Vice-President, Creative Projects Sean Kelly

Vice-President, Subscriptions and Product Sales Howard Jurofsky

Vice-President, Advertising Sales Richard B. Barthelmes

Controller Esther Barrett

President Leonard Mogel

year subscription, and $33.00 paid three-year subscription in territorial U.S. Additional $2.50 for Canada, Mexico, and foreign. Second class postage paid at New York, N.Y. and at additional mailing offices.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Subscriber please send change of address to Circulation Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. Allow six weeks for change. POSTMASTER: Please mail form 3579 notices to Circulation Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

ADVERTISING OFFICES: New York: Colin Wight, Advertising Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 688-4070. Chicago: William H. Sanke, Midwest Advertising Director, 360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. 60601 (312) 346-7145. West Coast: Lowell Fox and Associates, 16200 Ventura Boulevard, Encino, Ca. 91436 (213) 990-2950. Southern Offices: Brown & Company, Northside Tower, Suite 407, 6065 Roswell Road, N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30328 (404) 252-9820.

EDITORIAL INFORMATION: Publisher assumes no responsibility for unsolicited material.

HEAVY METAL MAGAZINE: "Heavy Metal" is a trademark of HM Communications, Inc. Copyright © 1979 HM Communications, Inc., 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. All rights reserved. Nothing may be reprinted in whole or in part without written permission from the publisher. Any similarity to real people and places in fiction and semi-fiction is purely coincidental.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: Published monthly by HM Communications, Inc., 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. $18.00 paid annual subscription, $26.00 paid two-

CALIFORNIA
The Golden State

Capital: Sacramento
Flower: Golden Poppy
Bird: Valley Quail
Tree: Redwood
Motto: "Eureka, I have found it."

12-28-78

It's 3 days after Christmas - 4 before the new year, and I find myself vacationing in L.A., having to write an editorial for our March issue. In the midst of mistletoe, chocolate reindeer, and ol' St. Nick, I'm to acclimate myself to a month that "goes in like a lion and out like a lamb."

March, Chaykin and Preisser's illustrated version of Bester's classic, The Stars My Destination... Wow.* Ellison hauntingly describes California talk shows in "Flop Sweat" Intense, man!* And McKie's S+M+A+S+H invades the adult world of Tonka toys and Matchbox wheelies. Far Out!* Plus--Corben, Moebius, Nino, etc...

© KOLOR VIEW PRESS • Los Angeles, Ca. 90064

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

29

30

31

32

33

34

35

36

37

38

39

40

41

42

43

44

45

46

47

48

49

50

51

52

53

54

55

56

57

58

59

60

61

62

63

64

65

66

67

68

69

70

71

72

73

74

75

76

77

78

79

80

81

82

83

84

85

86

87

88

89

90

91

92

93

94

95

96

97

98

99

100

101

102

103

104

105

106

107

108

109

110

111

112

113

114

115

116

117

118

119

120

121

122

123

124

125

126

127

128

129

130

131

132

133

134

135

136

137

138

139

140

141

142

143

144

145

146

147

148

149

150

151

152

153

154

155

156

157

158

159

160

161

162

163

164

165

166

167

168

169

170

171

172

173

174

175

176

177

178

179

180

181

182

183

184

185

186

187

188

189

190

191

192

193

194

195

196

197

198

199

200

201

202

203

204

205

206

207

208

209

210

211

212

213

214

215

216

217

218

219

220

221

222

223

224

225

226

227

228

229

230

231

232

233

234

235

236

237

238

239

240

241

242

243

244

245

246

247

248

249

250

251

252

253

254

255

256

257

258

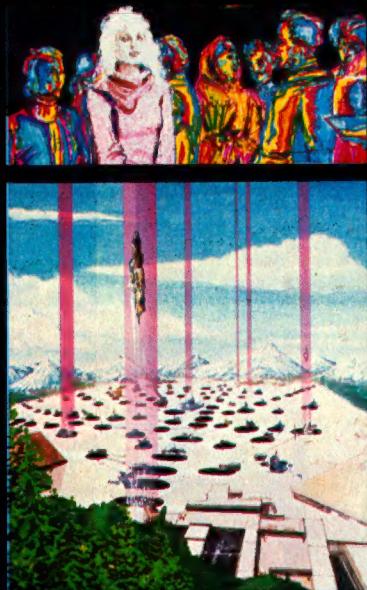

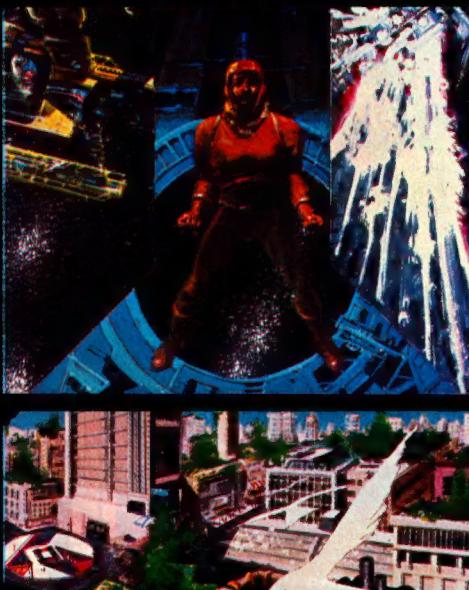

259

260

A MAJOR EVENT IN ILLUSTRATED SCIENCE FICTION

THE STARS MY DESTINATION

Alfred Bester's Incredible SF Adventure Adapted by Howard Chaykin & Byron Preiss

The Science Fiction Epic by Alfred Bester—An Incredible, Full-color Graphic Story Adaptation Illustrated by Howard Chaykin

For twenty years there has been one science fiction novel that fantasy illustrators around the world have wanted to draw—a novel so visual, so sweeping in its drama and characterizations, that it cried out for the graphic story form.

Now the wait is over—the illustrated Stars is here—an incredible tale of sf and suspense—of Gully Foyle, 3rd Class Mate on a shattered starship, who becomes the most famous, most dangerous and most incredible man of the 25th century.

If you've never read the novel, this illustrated version will stun you. If you know the book, this graphic story will delight you, with over 300 full-color illustrations by Howard Chaykin at a new plateau in his career.

Stars is an epic—a two-volume set weighing over two pounds, limited to strictly 3000 signed hard-cover copies with a special tipped-in color plate.

Investors ordering both volumes now will receive free a deluxe two-volume slipcase and an illustrated folio. Lowest numbered editions will be reserved for two-volume orders. Once these hardcovers are sold, no new copies will be produced.

Also Available

The Illustrated Harlan Ellison

Seven incredible stories—seven incredible artists—including Steranko, Reese and Alcala—with a special super 3-D section complete with glasses! Signed by Ellison and limited to strictly 3000 copies.

Enclosed is a total of _____ . Please send the deluxe, signed and numbered collector's editions specified below:

Both hardcover volumes of The Stars My Destination plus collector's folio and free two-volume slipcase: $30.00 + 95¢ postage and handling. Volume 1 to be shipped February '79. Volume 2 to be shipped June '79. Slipcase and collector's folio shipped with Volume 1 of all two-volume purchases.

The Stars My Destination, Volume 1, hardcover:
$14.95 + 95¢ postage and handling

The Illustrated Harlan Ellison, hardcover signed and numbered by the author: $14.95 + 95¢ postage and handling

"Repent, Harlequin!" portfolio signed and numbered by Steranko and Ellison: $10.00 + 95¢ postage and handling (supply limited)

Baronet Publishing Company Special Account
Post Office Box 5295 / F.D.R. Station / New York, New York 10022

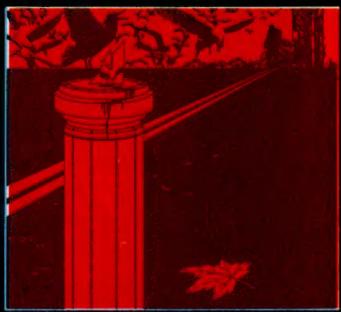

Mr./Ms. _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

CREDIT CARD HOLDERS—For faster service call toll free number 800-453-2400; in Utah 1-800-662-2500

Also Available

"Repent, Harlequin!" Said the Ticktockman

A black-and-white portfolio with illustrations by Steranko and text from Ellison's fabulous short story. A classic collaboration limited to strictly 1500 signed copies contained in an illustrated jacket.

The CLUB collection

Presented by one of Europe's oldest and finest cigarette papers for your pure and natural smoking enjoyment.

For a limited time, the creators of this distinguished, 100% pure linen and hemp paper are offering their customers this very exclusive collection:

- 4 packets of paper (2 single width and 2 cabaret size). They contain NO glue, chlorine or any harmful dyes to interfere with the pure smoking pleasure of this SELF-ADHERING paper.
- One unique, laminated decal suitable for decorative use.
- One indispensable, unburnable, 4 x 6 colorful CLUB tray.

A limited supply of the CLUB COLLECTION is now available for only $4.00 while offer lasts.

Make check or money order payable to:

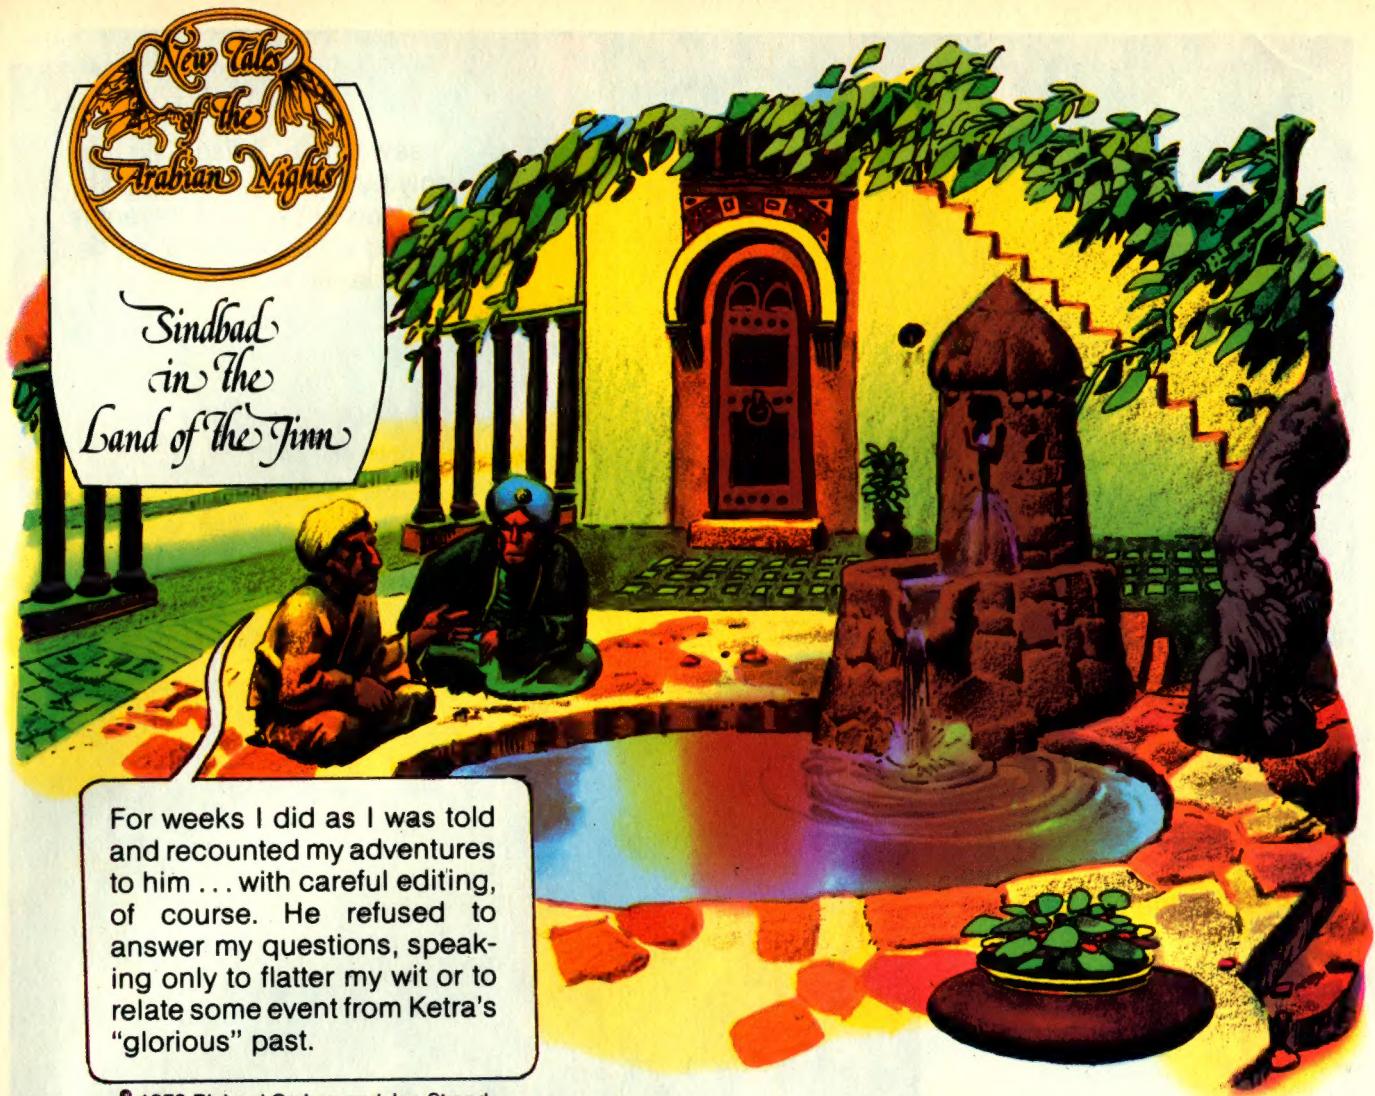

HIGHWAY IMPORTS

155 Avenue of the Americas New York, New York 10013
New York residents add 8% sales tax.

DIDDLE IT!
HOURS OF PLEASURE
The first adult color-in poster! pens included
You can diddle it by yourself or with a special friend(s).
A fine quality raised thermographic print 24x36".

DIDDLE
IT!
Please rush me _____ copies of EROTICA #1
@ $7.75 plus 75¢ postage and handling.
Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____
Zip _____

For weeks I did as I was told and recounted my adventures to him . . . with careful editing, of course. He refused to answer my questions, speaking only to flatter my wit or to relate some event from Ketra's "glorious" past.

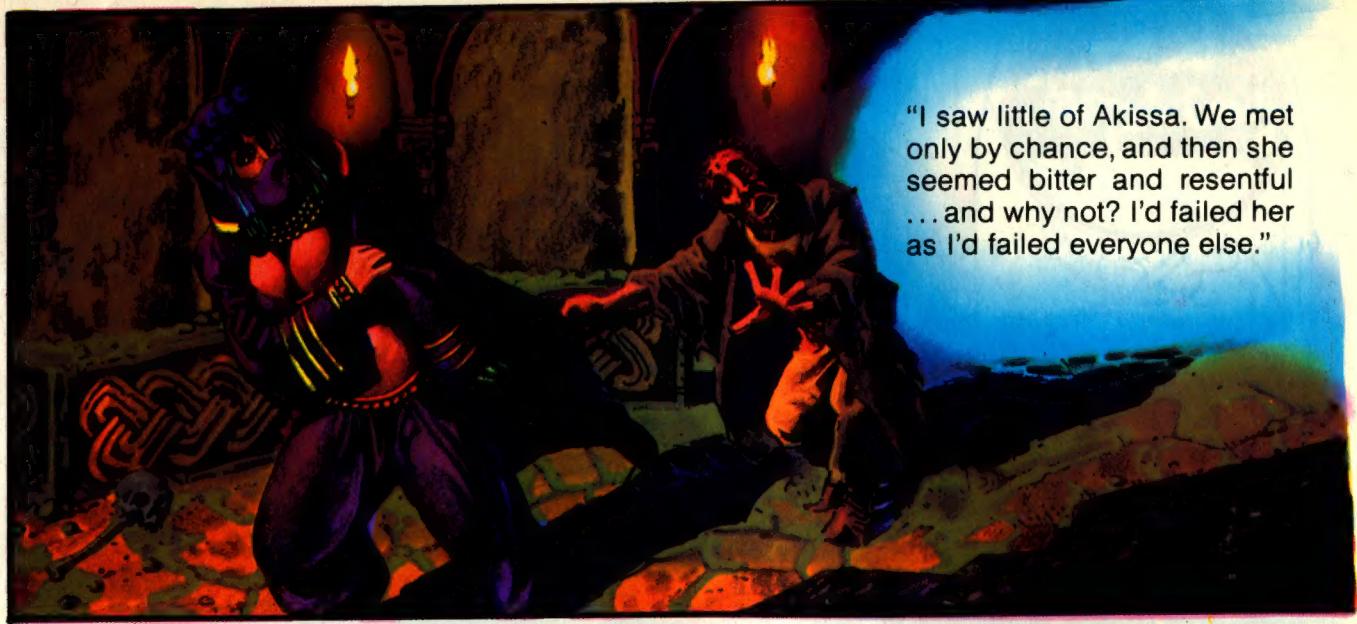

© 1978 Richard Corben and Jan Strnad

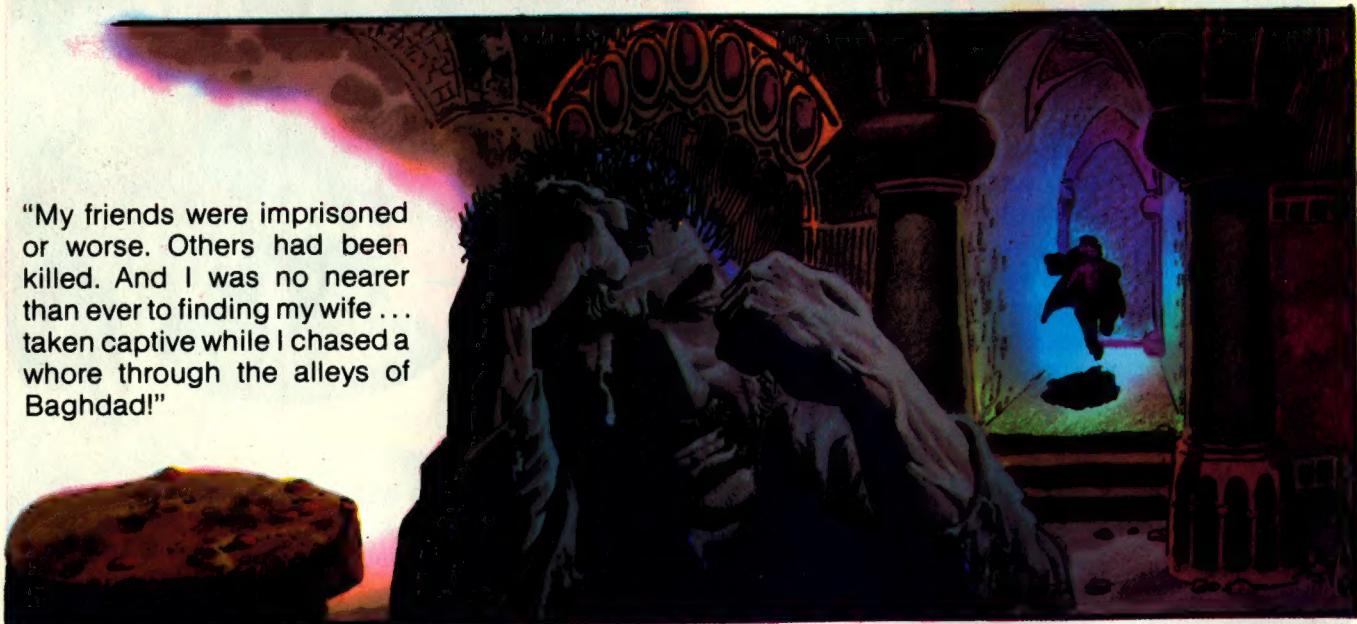

"My arm healed, but I felt my strength slipping away, my will to resist . . . dimming."

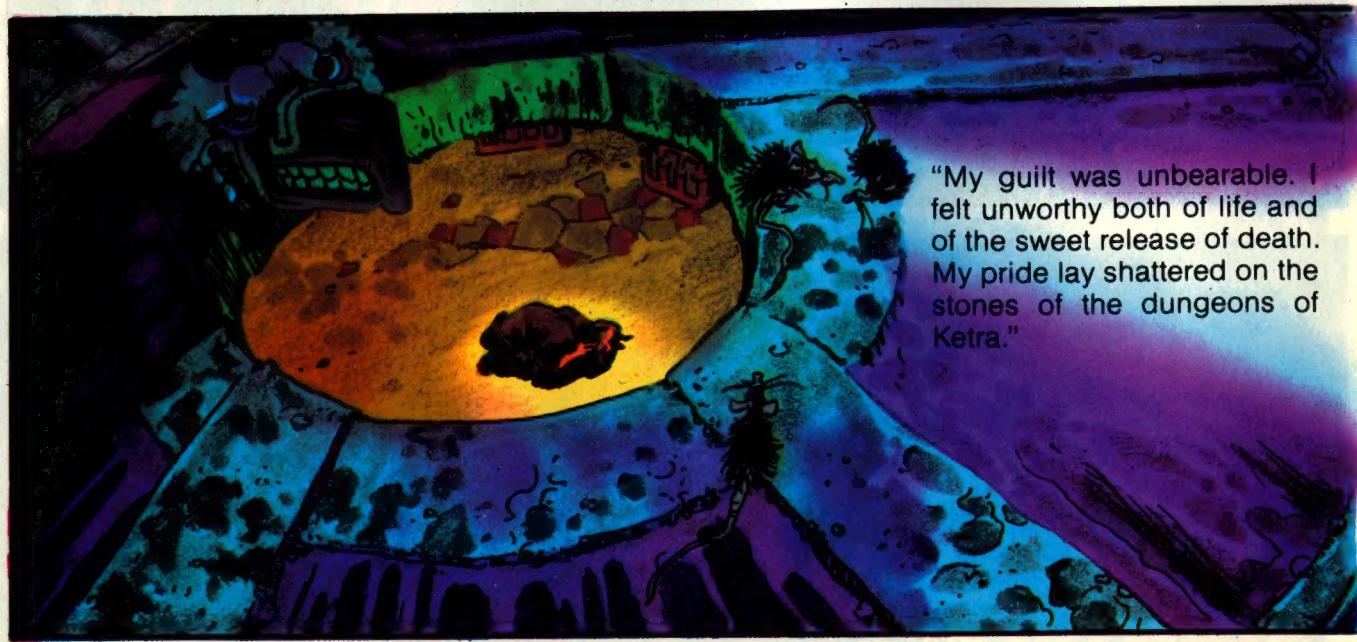

"And my sleep was haunted by visions of myself—accursed of Allah—tormented and taunted by demons, a slave to my own selfish nature."

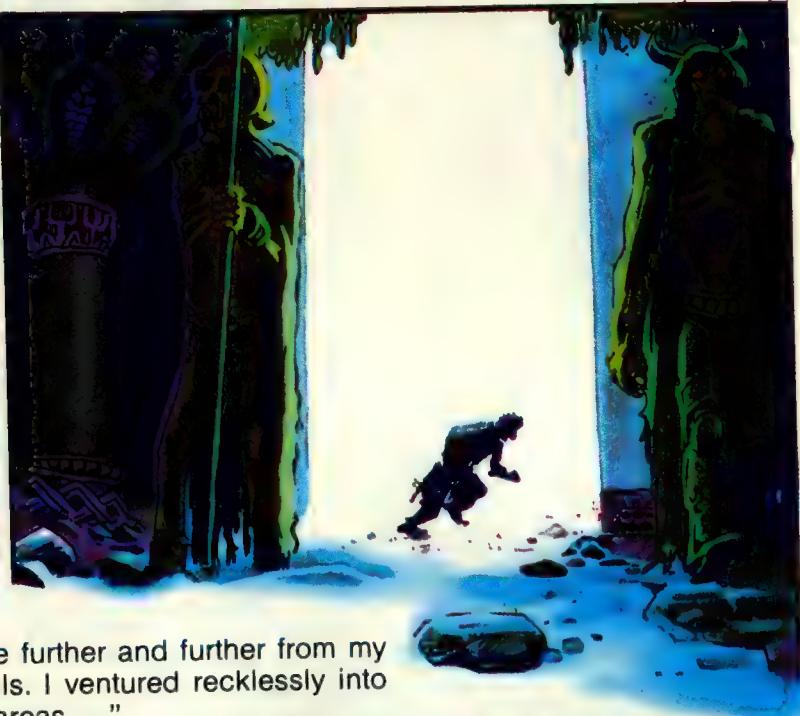

"I saw little of Akissa. We met only by chance, and then she seemed bitter and resentful ... and why not? I'd failed her as I'd failed everyone else."

"My friends were imprisoned or worse. Others had been killed. And I was no nearer than ever to finding my wife ... taken captive while I chased a whore through the alleys of Baghdad!"

"My guilt was unbearable. I felt unworthy both of life and of the sweet release of death. My pride lay shattered on the stones of the dungeons of Ketra."

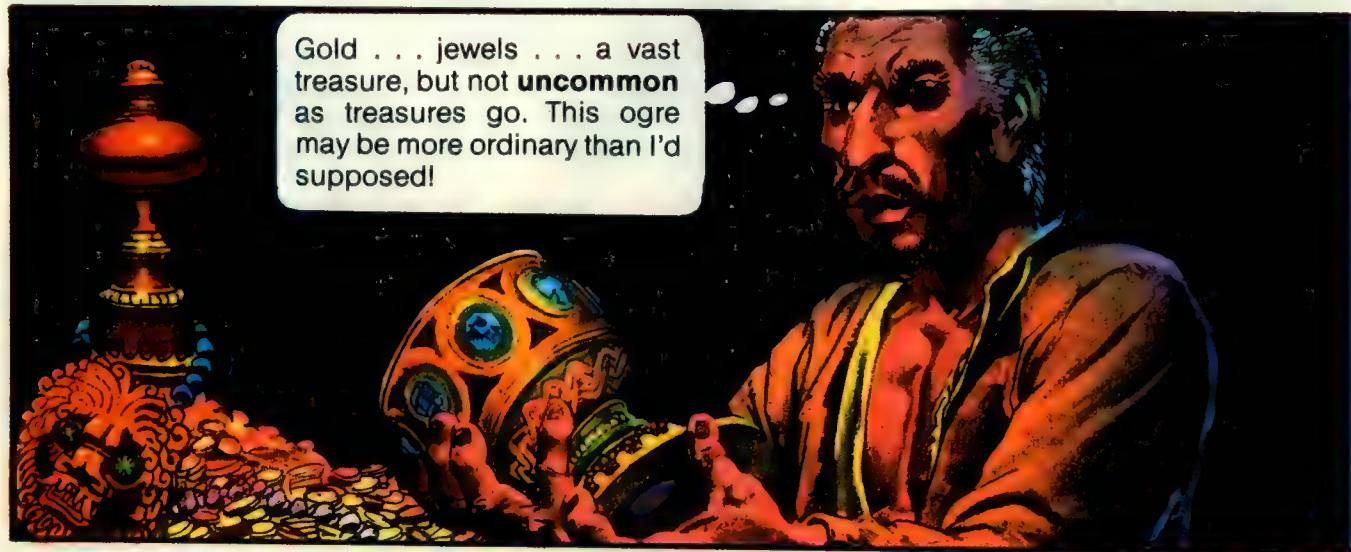

"This self-abhorrence led me further and further from my assigned chambers and halls. I ventured recklessly into many forbidden, dangerous areas . . ."

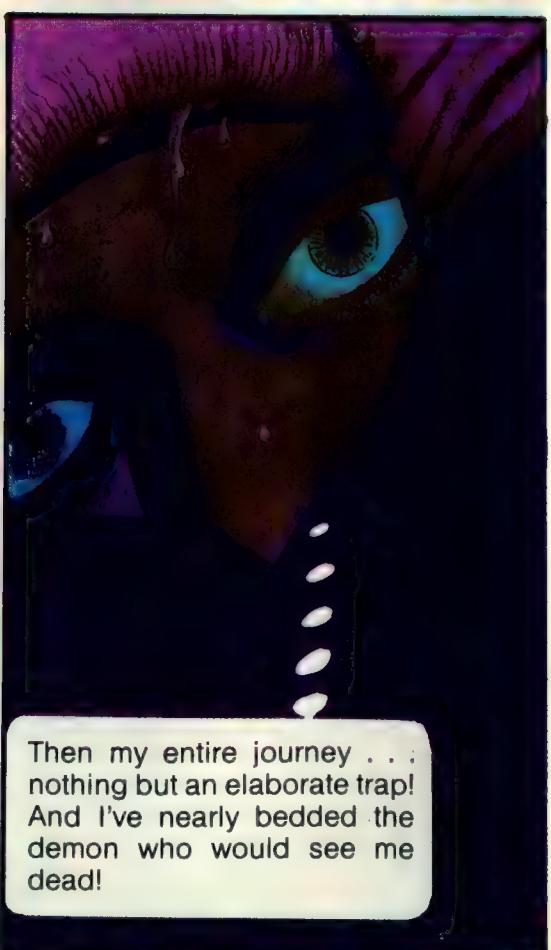

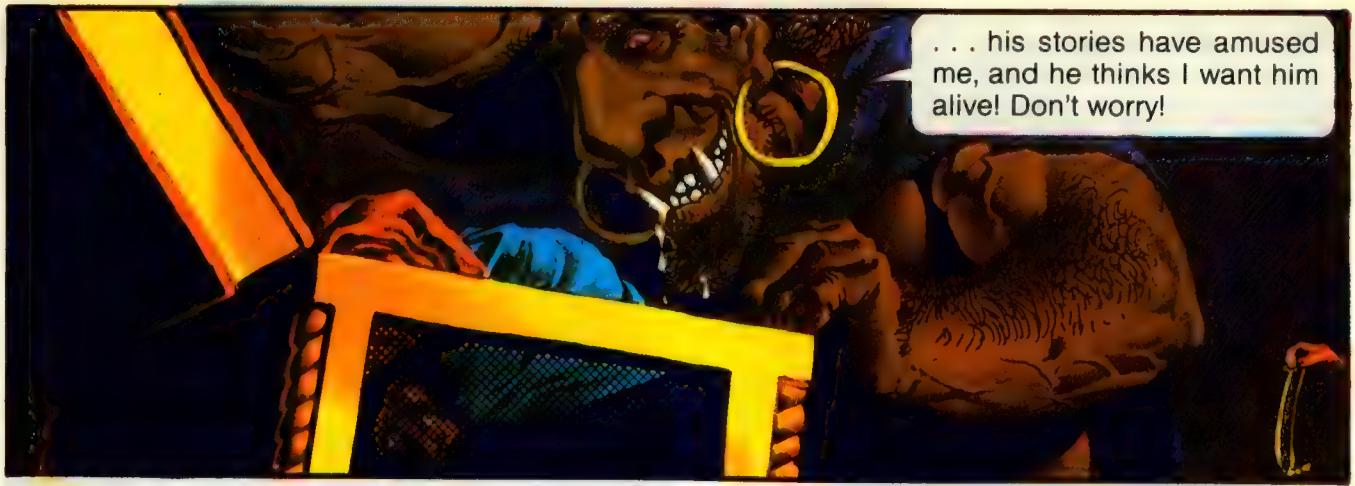

"...until I came upon the deadliest room of all."

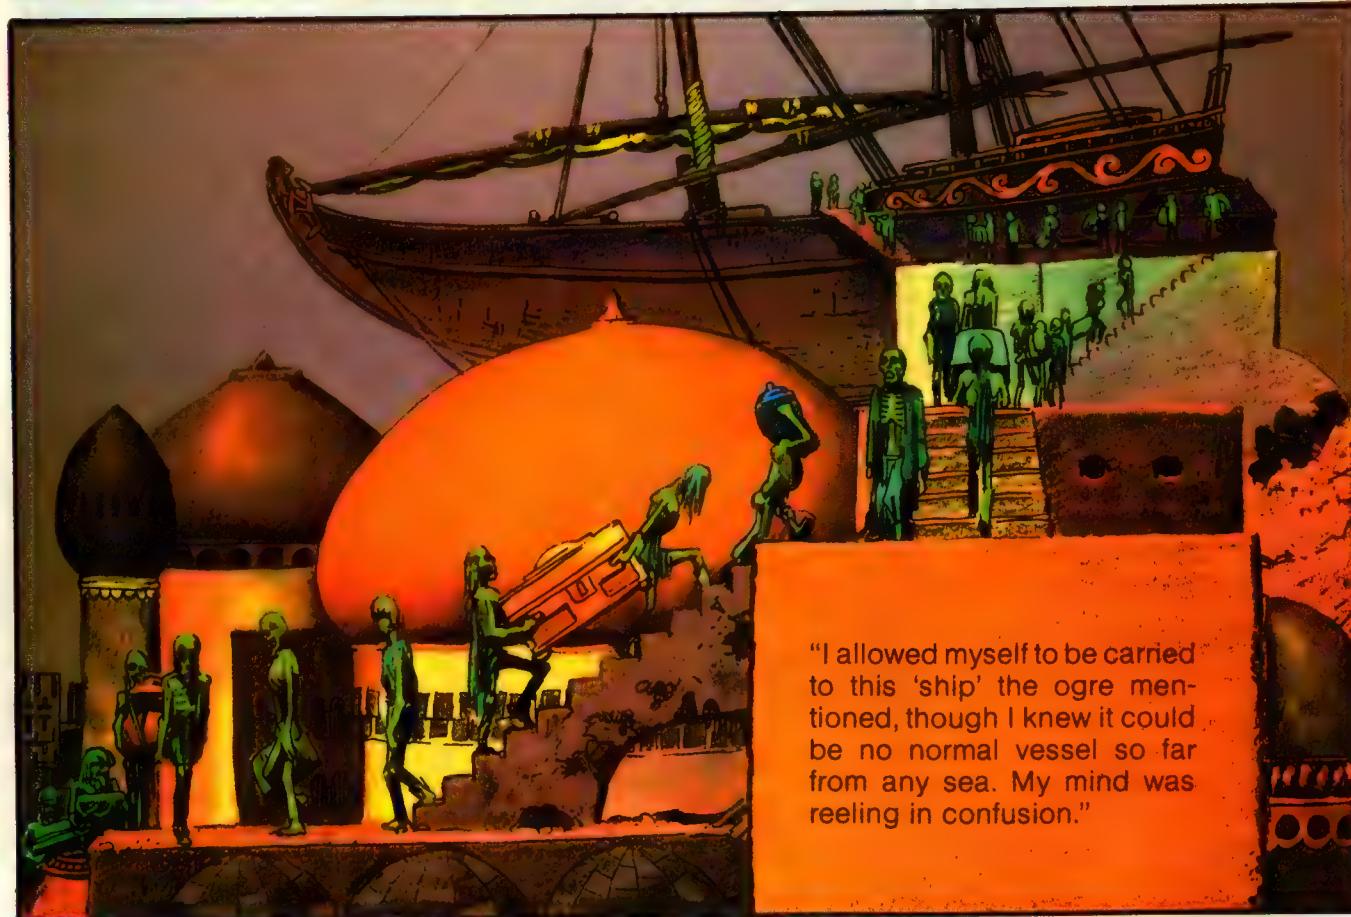

Gold . . . jewels . . . a vast treasure, but not uncommon as treasures go. This ogre may be more ordinary than I'd supposed!

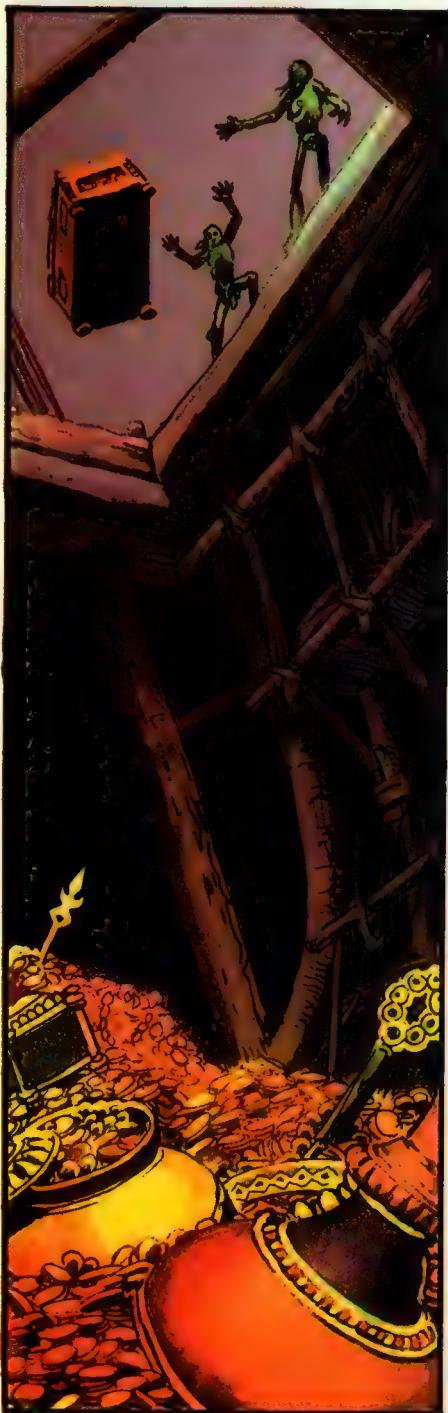

Load the treasure on the ship.
And tell the cook to begin a stew—I'll bring the meat myself.

"I allowed myself to be carried to this 'ship' the ogre mentioned, though I knew it could be no normal vessel so far from any sea. My mind was reeling in confusion."

"Akissa . . . another form of the jinni Al-Ra'ad al-Kasif! My pilgrimage . . . just a ruse to lure me into death! For all I knew, there was no 'King of Kings of the Jinn', no Zul'
Janahayn at all! And my wife, Zulaykha—would I ever be with her again?"

to be continued

THE AIR TIGHT
GARAGE
OF JERRY
CORN
ELIUS
MOEBIUS

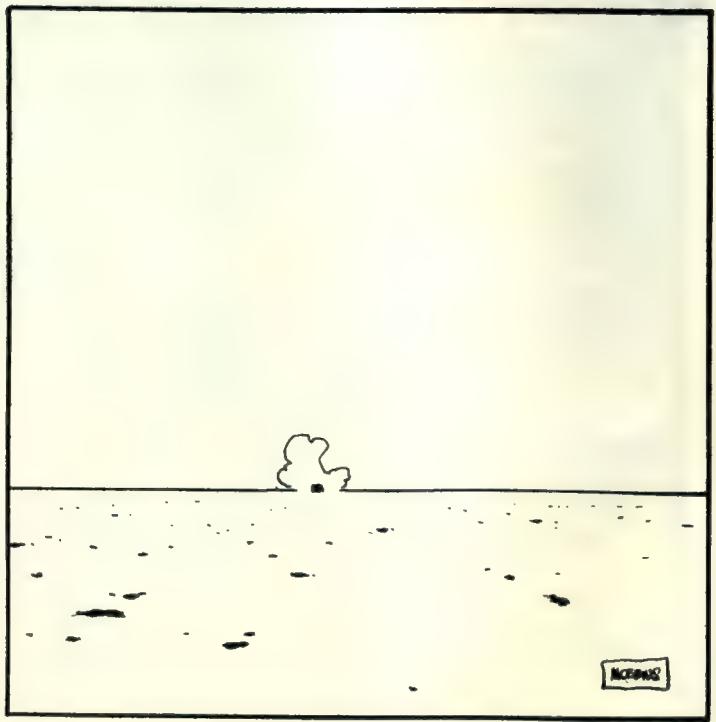

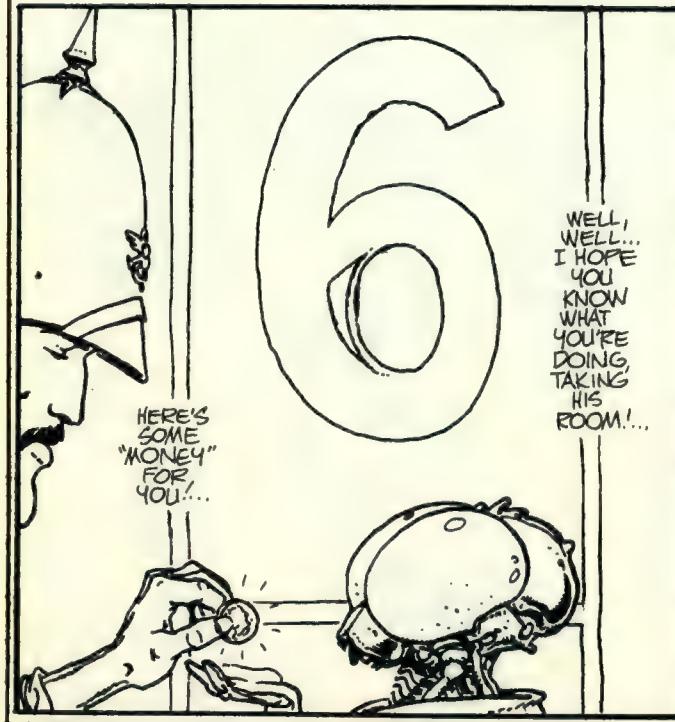

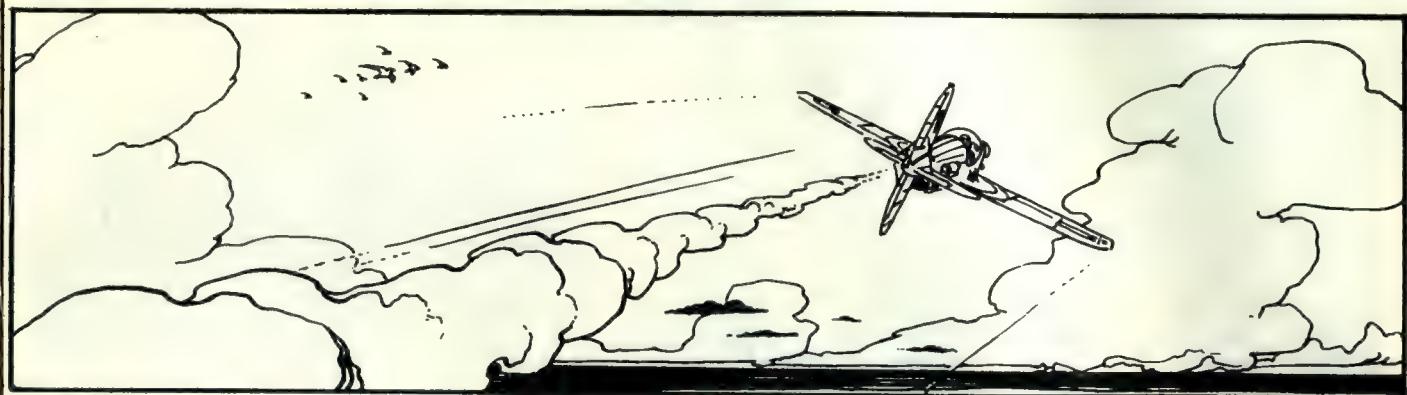

WE'RE JUST PASSING THROUGH.

WE'RE NOT REALLY HERE. DO YOU UNDERSTAND?

IT WON'T BE LONG;
IT WON'T
BE LONG...

OH, BUT IT CAN'T GO
ON THIS WAY,
NO, NO!... THE EXOS WILL
SEIZE POWER, AND THEN WE'LL SEE SOMETHING.
YEAH! YEAH!
WE'LL SEE!...
WHAT?

MEANWHILE...

TO BE CONTINUED...

WELL, OLD BUDDIES, AT LAST THE TIME HAS COME FOR US TO SKAG THE GANGLIONS OF THESE BASTARDS!

CHARGE!

WE'LL DISCONNECT THEIR FEMORAL CONDYLE!

RASLASKOV!

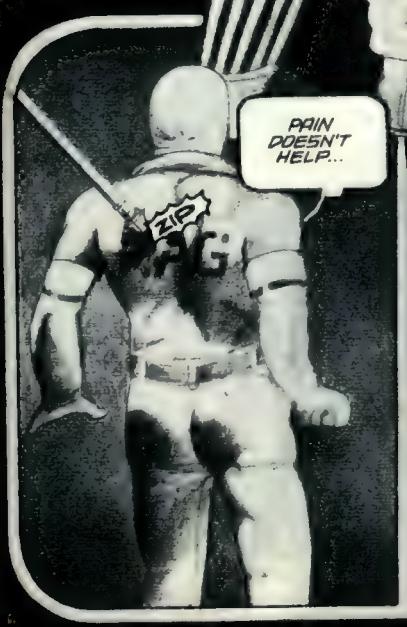

RRRRRRRR

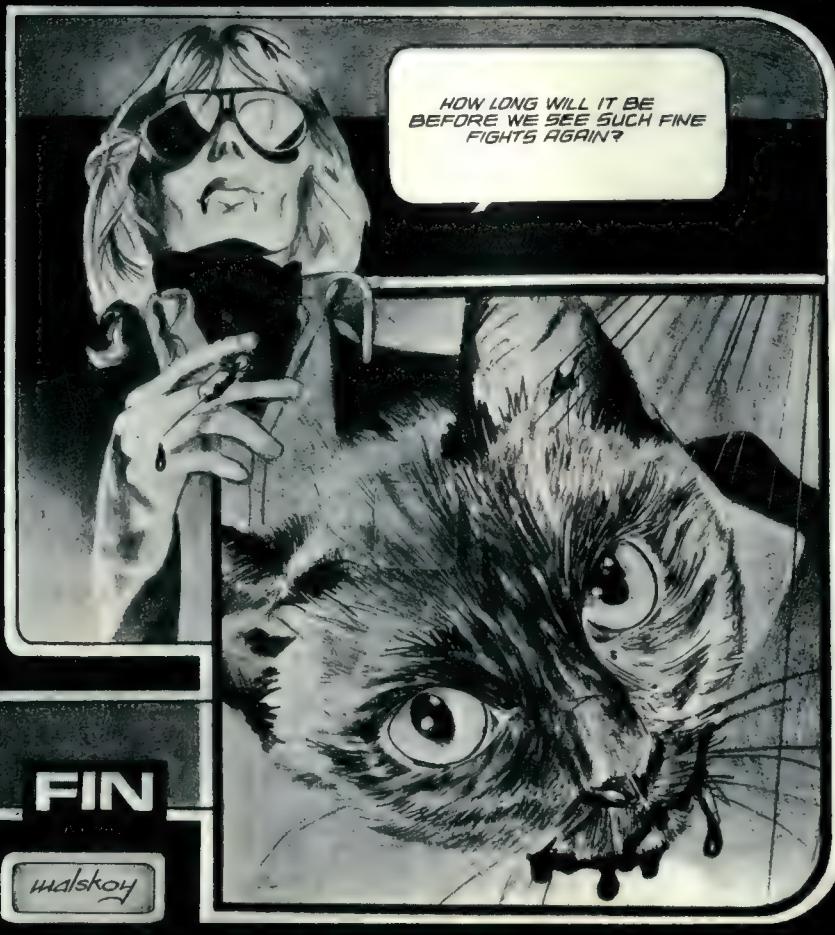

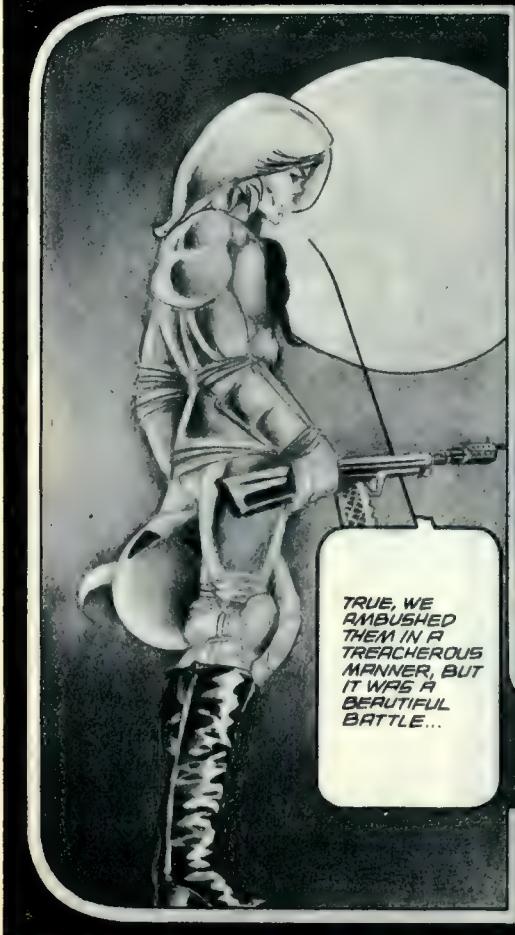

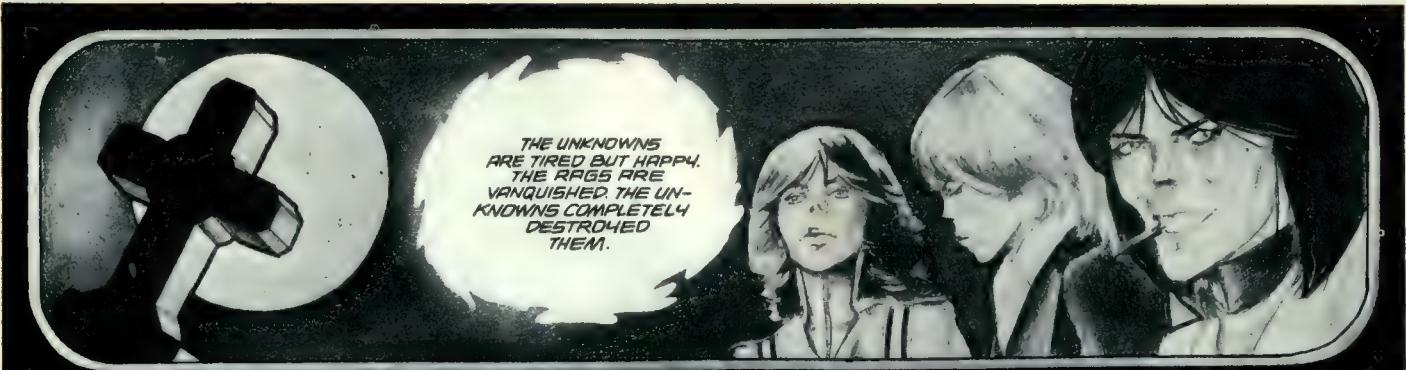

TONIGHT THE TRIDENT OF THE UNKNOWN WILL MAKE BLOOD FLOW.

This was a time of high adventure, rich living, and hard dying...

...but nobody thought so.

This was a future of fortune, culture, and vice...

...but nobody admitted it.

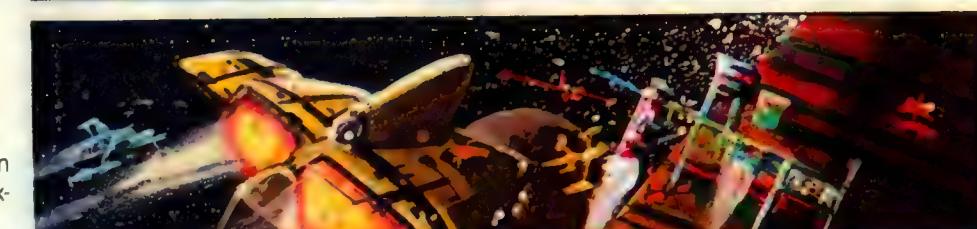

This was an age of extremes, a fascinating century of freaks.

...but nobody loved it

Three planets and eight satellites and eleven billion people swarmed in one of the most exciting ages ever known.

Yet minds still yearned for other times, as always.

The solar system seethed with activity, learning new technologies that spewed forth almost before the old had been mastered, girding itself for the first exploration of the stars; but—

"Where are the new frontiers?" the Romantics cried, unaware that the frontier of the mind had been opened in a laboratory on Calisto at the turn of the 24th century.

ALFRED BEETERS STARS MY DESTINATION

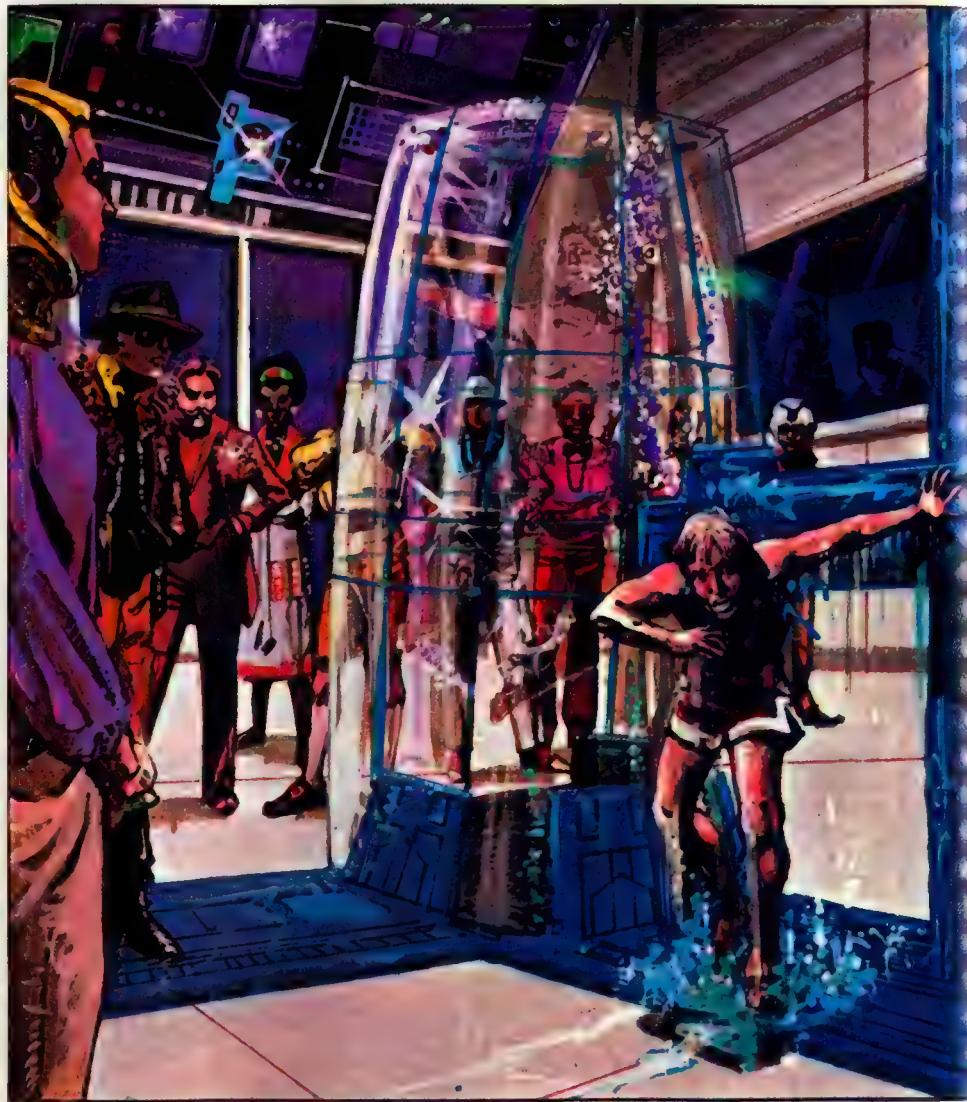

A researcher named Jaunte set fire to his bench and himself (accidently) and let out a yell for a particular fire extinguisher. Who was as surprised as Jaunte when he found himself standing next to that same extinguisher, 70 feet from his lab bench.

They investigated Jaunte savagely. Teleportation . . . transportation through space by an effort of the mind had long been a theoretical concept, but this was the first time it had ever taken place before professional observers.

Twelve psychologists and neurometrists sealed Jaunte into an unbreakable crystal tank and let Jaunte watch as they smashed the handle of a valve feeding water into the tank. They reasoned if it had required the threat of death to goad Jaunte into teleporting in the first place, then they'd damn well threaten him with death again. Observers collected data with the tense precision of an eclipse camera crew.

He teleported again.

The experts examined and questioned him. On the technical grapevine, they sent out a call for suicide volunteers. They briefed them thoroughly. Then they proceeded to murder the volunteers. Eighty percent died and the agonies and remorse of their murderers would make a fascinating and horrible study, but that has no place in history except to highlight the monstrosity of the times. Eighty percent of the volunteers died but 20 per cent jaunted. The name became a word almost immediately.

The body of knowledge grew rapidly. By the first decade of the 24th century the principles of jaunting were established. The primitive days were past. It was no longer necessary to threaten a man with death to make him teleport. They had learned how to teach a man to recognize, discipline, and exploit yet another resource of his mind.

How exactly did a man teleport? An unsatisfactory explanation was provided by Thompson, a publicity representative of the Jaunte Schools in a press interview.

Thompson: Jaunting is like seeing—a natural aptitude of almost every human being; but it can only be developed by training and experience.

Reporter: You mean we can think ourselves from New York to Los Angeles?

Thompson: Precisely, provided the person jaunting knows exactly where he is when he starts and where he's going.

Reporter: How's that?

Thompson: If you were in a dark room and unaware of where you were, it would be impossible to jaunte with safety. A person cannot jaunte from an unknown departure point to an unknown destination. Both must be known.

Any man was capable of jaunting provided he could visualize and concentrate. He had to see it completely and precisely and had to concentrate latent energy of his mind into a single thrust to get him there. Above all he had to have faith. He had to believe he would jaunte. The slightest doubt would block the mind thrust necessary for teleportation.

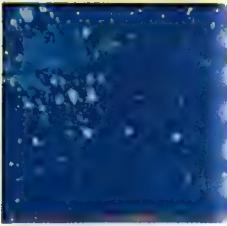

Space set the final limitation. No man had ever jumped further than a thousand miles. He could work his way in jauntes from Nome to Mexico, but no jump could exceed 1000 miles.

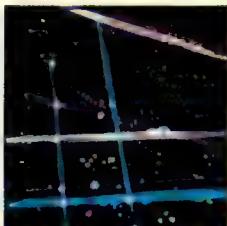

The old Department of Motor Vehicles took over the new job of testing and classifying jaunte applicants. The old Automobile Club of America changed its name to the A.J.A.

Despite all efforts, no man had jaunted across space. Helmut Grant spent a month memorizing the co-ordinates of a jaunte stage on the moon. He jumped and they never found him.

Within three generations, three planets and eight satellites were on the jaunte. Economic structures crashed and new laws were enacted to meet the needs of mass jaunting.

There were land riots as jaunting poor deserted the slums for plains and forests.

There was a revolution in office building—devices were introduced to prevent unlawful jaunting.

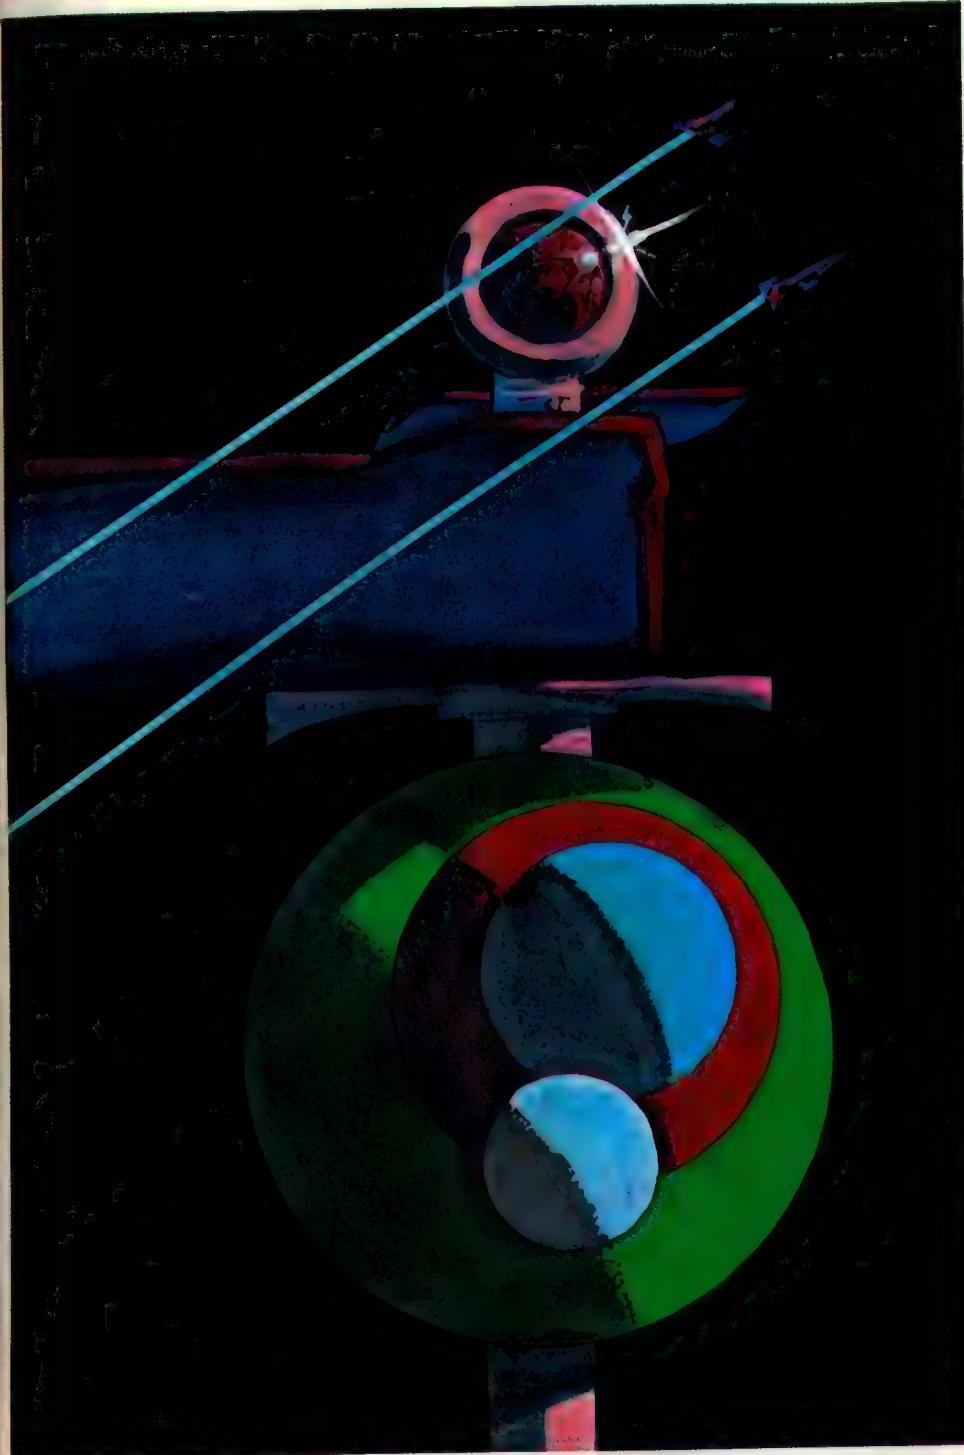

There were strikes as old industries adapted to the jaunting revolution. There was economic chaos as vagrant jaunters took disease to defenseless countries.

The Japanese beetle and chestnut blight spread to different territories. The worst sort of Victorian prudery returned as a moral response to the dangers of jaunting.

A cruel and vicious war broke out as a result of the political and economic pressures of teleportation. Until the Jaunte Age, the three Inner Planets—Venus, Terra, and Mars—had lived in delicate economic balance with the seven inhabited Outer Satellites—Io, Europa, Ganymede, and Callisto of Jupiter, Rhea and Titan of Saturn, and Lassell of Neptune. The United Outer Satellites supplied raw materials for the Inner Planets's factories and a market for finished goods. Within a decade this balance was upset by jaunting.

With trade exchange disrupted, economic war threatened to denigrate into a shooting war. Inner Planets's cartels refused to ship manufacturing equipment to the Outer Satellites; as a protective move against competition the Outer Satellites confiscated the planets already in operation on their worlds, broke patent agreements, ignored royalty obligations . . . and war was next.

It was an age of freaks, monsters, and grotesques. All the world was misshapen in marvelous and malevolent ways. The Classicists and Romantics who despised it were blind to the cold fact that progress stems from the clashing merger of antagonistic extremes. Classicists and Romantics alike were unaware that the Solar System was on the verge of a human explosion.

It is against this seething background that the history of Gulliver Foyle begins.

He was one hundred and seventy days dying and not yet dead. He fought for survival with the passion of a beast in a trap. He was delirious and rotting but occasionally his mind emerged from the burning nightmare of survival into something resembling sanity. Then he lifted his face and muttered, "What's a matter, me? Help. Help is all."

He had been raised in the gutter school of the 25th century and spoke nothing but the gutter tongue. Of all brutes in the world he was among the least valuable alive and most likely to survive. So he struggled and prayed, but occasionally his raveling mind leaped backward to his childhood and remembered a nursery jingle:

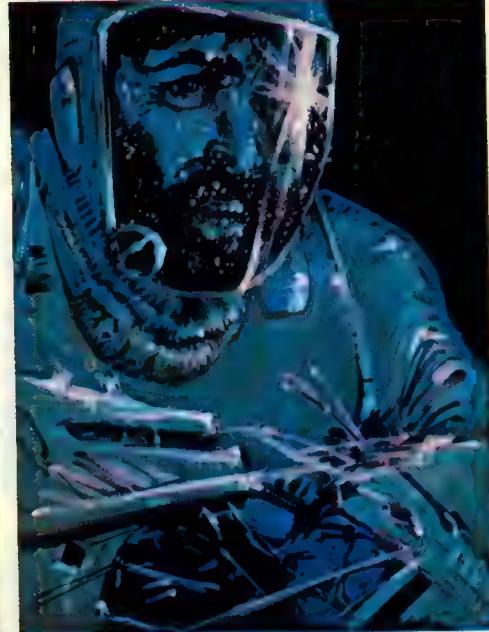

Gully Foyle is my name
And Terra is my nation.
Deep space is my dwelling place
And death's my destination.

He was Gulliver Foyle.

Thirty years old. Big-boned and rough. The oiler, the wiper, the bunkman, too easy for trouble, too slow for fun, too lazy for love. The official record showed the lethargic outline of his character:

A man of physical strength and intellectual potential stunted by lack of ambition.

He had been content to drift from moment to moment of existence for thirty years like some heavily armored creature, sluggish and indifferent—but now he was adrift in space for one hundred and seventy days and the key to his awakening was in the lock.

The spaceship "Nomad" drifted halfway between Mars and Jupiter. Whatever war catastrophe had wrecked it had taken a sleek steel rocket, one hundred yards long and one hundred feet broad and mangled it into a skeleton on which was mounted the remains of cabins, holds, decks, and bulkheads.

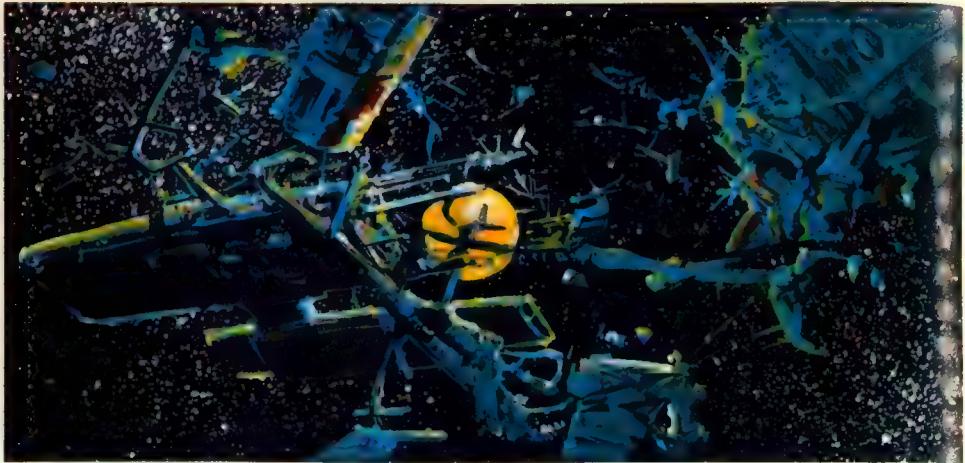

The wreck was filled with a floating conglomerate of frozen debris that hung within the vessel like an instantaneous photograph of an explosion. The minute gravitational attraction of the bits of rubble for each other was slowly drawing them into clusters, which were periodically torn apart by the passage through them of the survivor still alive in the wreck—Gulliver Foyle.

On the hundred and seventy-first day of his fight for survival, Foyle answered these questions. His heart hammered and his throat burned. He groped in the dark for the air tank which shared his coffin with him, and checked it. The tank was empty. Another would have to be moved in at once.

He lived in the only airtight room left intact in the wreck, the tool locker off the main deck corridor. The locker was four feet wide, four feet deep, and nine feet high. Foyle had existed in this coffin for five months, twenty days, and four hours.

He felt through the locker shelves and located a torn spacesuit. It was the only suit aboard "Nomad", and Foyle no longer remembered where he had found it. He had sealed the tear with emergency spray, but had no way of refilling the empty oxygen cartridges on the back. Foyle got into the suit. It would hold enough air to allow him five minutes in vacuum.

Foyle opened the locker door and plunged out into the black frost of space. The air in the locker puffed out with him and its moisture congealed into a tiny snow cloud that drifted down the torn main deck corridor. Foyle heaved the exhausted air tank, floated it out of the locker, and abandoned it. A minute was gone.

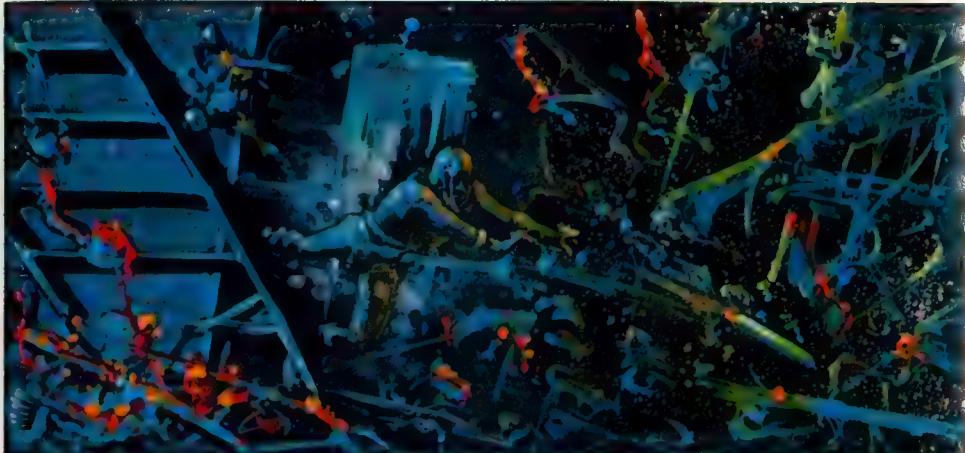

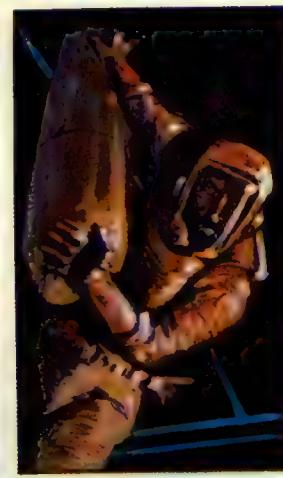

"Who are you?"
"Gully Foyle is my name."

"Where are you from?"
"Terra is my nation."

"Where are you now?"
"Deep space is my dwelling place."

"Where are you bound?"
"Death's my destination."

He squirmed down the main deck corridor and ascended a stairway to the control deck. Most of the walls were gone. The sun on his right, the stars on his left, Foyle shot aft toward the galley storeroom.

As Foyle passed through a corridor, he had a quick view of himself in the polished chrome of a broken door. Gully Foyle, a giant black creature, bearded, crusted with dried blood and filth, emaciated, with sick patient eyes. He turned away and headed toward the galley storeroom.

Foyle gathered up ration packets, concentrates, and a chunk of ice from a burst water tank. Putting it all in a cauldron, he turned and darted out.

At the door to nowhere he glanced at himself again. Then he stopped his motion in bewilderment. He stared at the stars which had become familiar friends after five months. There was an intruder among them.

Then Foyle realized he was staring at a spaceship, stern rockets flaring as it accelerated on a sunward course that would pass him.

"No," he muttered. "No, man, no."

He was continually suffering from hallucinations. He turned to return to the locker. Then he looked again. It was still a spaceship.

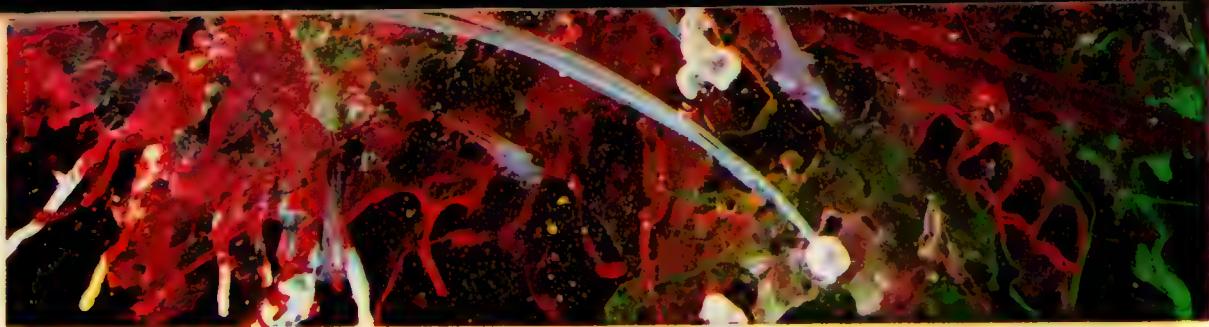

"Six months already," he said in his gutter tongue. "Is it now, God? If it's a ship, I'm yours. You own me. If it's a gaff, if it's no ship, I unseal right now and blow my guts. Yes or no. That's all."

He looked and for a third time he saw a spaceship.

Foyle went hurtling down the control deck corridor toward the bridge, but at the companionway stairs he restrained himself. He could not remain conscious for more than a few minutes without refilling his suit.

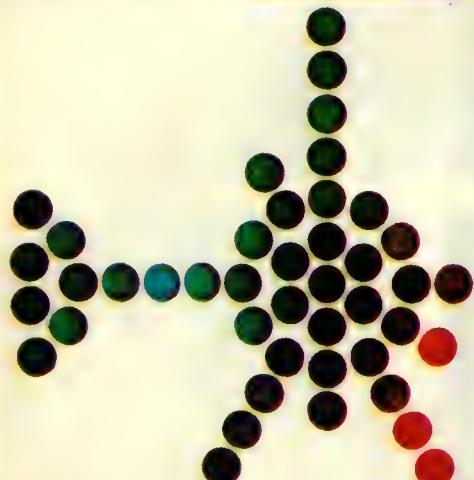

He mounted to the control bridge. Through the starboard observation port he saw the spaceship, stern rocket still flaring, evidently making a major alteration in course for it was bearing down on him very slowly.

The flares flashed in space and the radioactives incorporated in their combustion set up a static howl that must register on any receiver.

The stranger's jets cut off. He had been seen. He would be rescued.

Foyle darted back to his locker and replenished his spacesuit. He began to weep. He gathered his only possessions—an egg slicer upon whose wires he would pluck simple tunes, a faceless clock which he kept wound just to listen to the ticking. He dropped them in his excitement, hunted for them in the dark, then started to laugh at himself. He refilled his suit and hurried back to the bridge.

The stranger slid into the outermost rim of light from the flares, approaching slowly, looking him over cautiously.

"Hurry up," he crooned. "Come on, baby you." For a moment, Foyle was scared: The ship was cautious; he felt it could have been the Outer

Then he saw the familiar red and blue emblem on her side, and Foyle knew she was a sister ship—a member of the fleet of the munificent, beneficent, industrial Presteign clan—Presteign of Terra. The "Nomad" was also a Presteign ship.

The ship came abreast of Foyle, ports along its side glowing with friendly light, its name and registry clearly visible. She was "Vorga-T:1139."

The ship was alongside him in a moment, passing him in a second, disappearing in a third.

Foyle stopped dancing and crooning. He jumped to the panel and slapped buttons. Flares leaped from the hull of the "Nomad" in a madness of color, pulsing, pleading. "Vorga-T:1139" passed silently and implacably, as it accelerated on a sunward course.

In five seconds he lived and he died. After thirty years of existence and six months of torture, Gully Foyle, the stereotype common man was no more. The key turned in the lock of his soul and the door was opened.

① "You pass me by," he said with a slow mounting fury. "You leave me rot like a dog. You leave me die, 'Vorga.' 'Vorga-T: 1139.' "No. I get outta here, me. I follow you, "Vorga". I find you, 'Vorga'. I pay you back, me. I rot you. I kill you, 'Vorga.' "

① The acid of fury ran through him, eating away the brute patience and sluggishness that had made a cipher of Gully Foyle, precipitating a chain of reactions that would make an infernal machine of Gully Foyle. He was dedicated.

① He did what the cipher did not do. He rescued himself. He combed the wreckage and devised a harness for his shoulders. He attached an air tank to the harness and to his helmet with an improvised hose.

He thought.

① He learned how to use the instruments that still functioned. He took sights. "Nomad" was drifting in space three hundred million miles from the sun. Hanging in the foreground was Jupiter, a distinctly planetary disc to the naked eye. Jupiter was not, however, habitable.

① Like all the outer planets beyond the asteroid orbits, it was a frozen mass, but its four largest satellites swarmed with cities at war with the Inner Planets. He would be a prisoner but he would be alive.

① Foyle studied the engine room of "Nomad". He repaired a connection between fuel tanks and one still-operative jet chamber. The "Nomad's" fuel was still liquid (the tanks were on the sunside of the ship), but there was no gravity to pull the fuel into the jet.

① Foyle studied manuals. If he could put "Nomad" in a spin, the centrifugal force would impart enough gravity to pull fuel down into the combustion chamber of the jet. To make the "Nomad" spin, however, he had to first fire the jet.

① He thought his way out of the problem. He opened the drainage pet cock of the combustion chamber and painfully filled it, by hand. Now if it ignited, the jet would fire long enough to put the ship in a spin. Then the flow of fuel would start.

① He tried a match, which would not burn in space. He tried flint and steel, which would not glow in absolute zero. He found books and read. Although he blacked out frequently, he thought and planned.

② He took ice from the frozen galley tanks and melted them with body heat. The water was added to the combustion chamber. The fuel and water did not mix. The latter floated in a thin layer over the fuel.

③ Foyle found a silvery bit of wire in the chemical storeroom. He pushed it into the open pet cock and it ignited on contact with the water. Sodium metal. The heat touched off the fuel.

④ Foyle sealed the pet cock. The fuel fired the operative jet engine of the "Nomad" and the ship went into a slow spin. Gravity returned. Floating debris hit ceiling, decks, and corridors.

⑤ Wasting no time on cheers, Foyle struggled forward to the bridge. An observation from the deck would tell him whether the "Nomad" was committed to a plunge in deep space on a course to Jupiter and rescue.

⑥ The slight gravity made it difficult to haul his air tank. The sudden acceleration left him assaulted by masses of debris in flight from the corridors and the bridge. He pushed up the companionway stairs and was caught by a half ton of steel tumbleweed.

⑦ He was pinned in the center of the metal ball with an impact that attacked his hold on consciousness. He was barely alive, and he fought for his life.

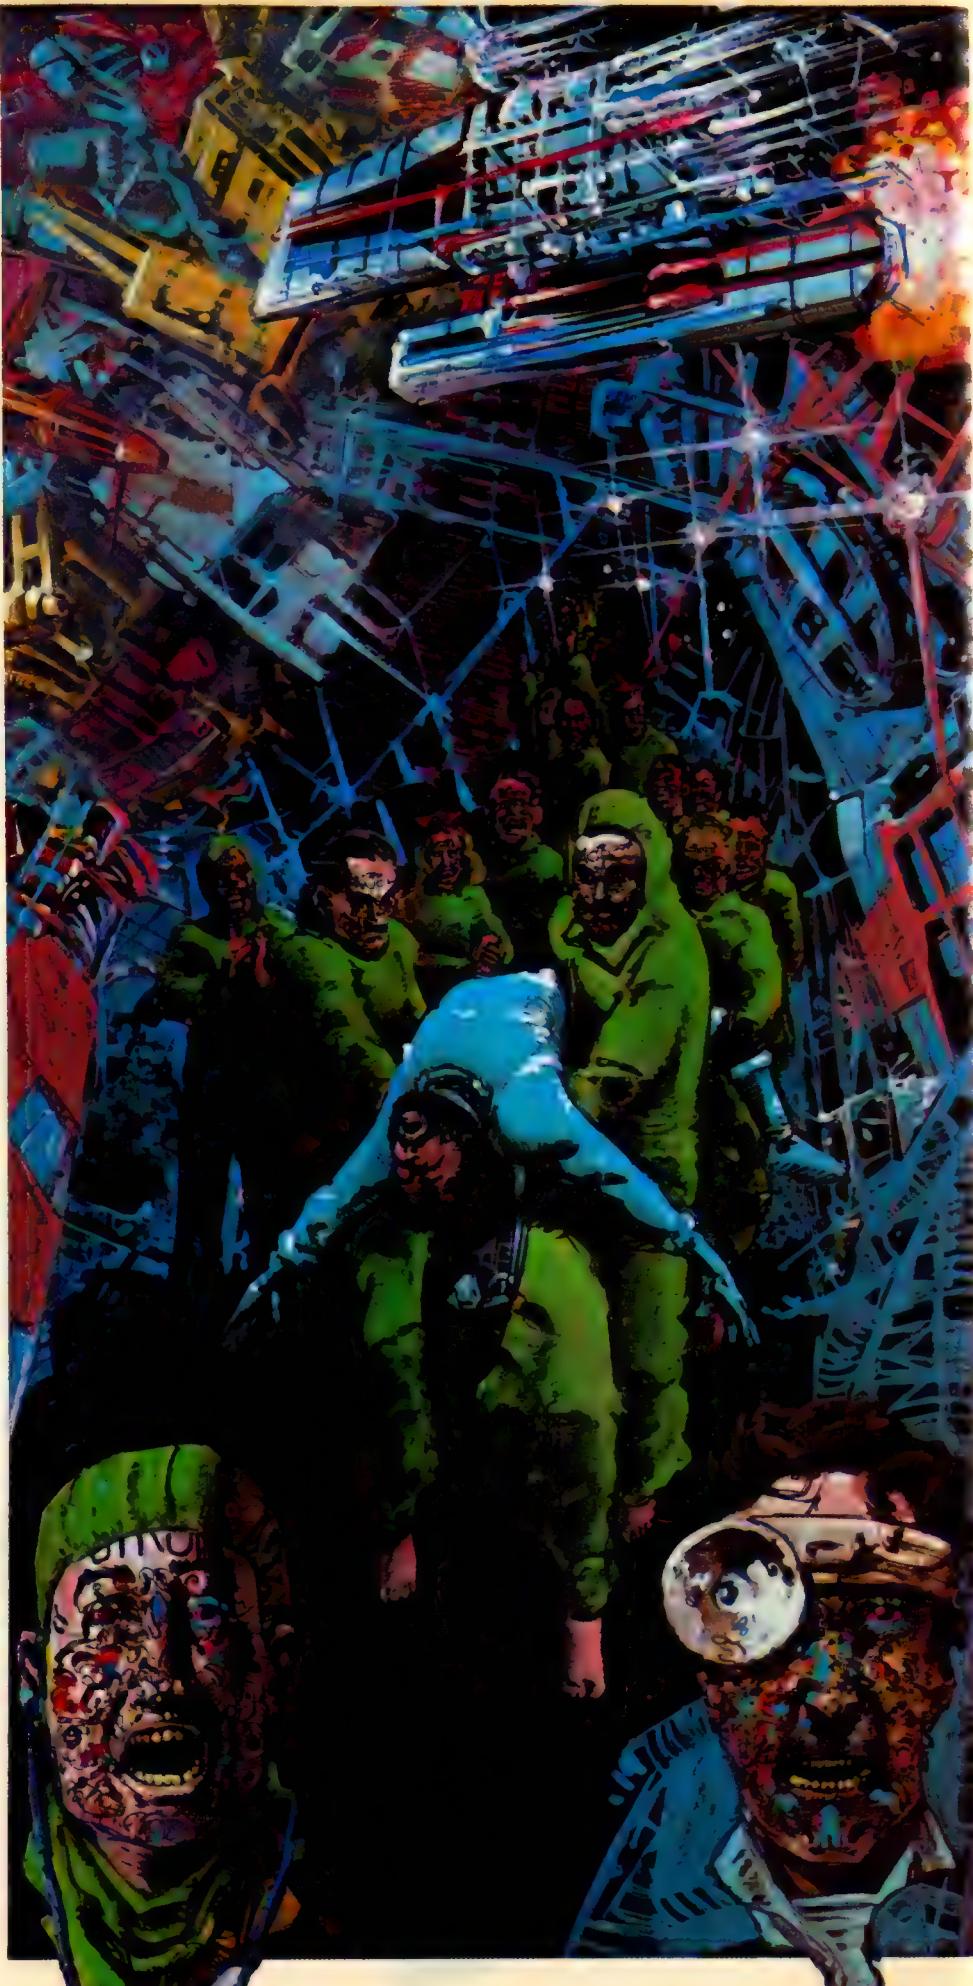

⑧ "Who are you?"
"Where are you from?"
"Where are you now?"
"Where are you bound?"

Between Mars and Jupiter floats the broad belt of asteroids the most unique of which is Sargasso. A tiny planet made up of natural rock and wrecked salvage, it was inhabited by savages for two hundred years. They were the only savages of the 24th century; descendants of a research team that had been marooned in the asteroid two hundred years earlier. By the time their descendants were discovered, they had built up a world of their own, salvaging the parts of other ships and practicing a travesty of the scientific method they remembered from their predecessors. They called themselves the Scientific People. They were quickly forgotten.

"Nomad" looped through space in the slow spiral of a weakened animalcule. It passed Sargasso and was immediately captured by the savages to be incorporated into their little planet's architecture. They found Foyle.

He awoke once while being taken through the passages in the scavenger asteroid. He saw the plates with names of such long forgotten ships as "Syrtus Rambler" and "Three Ring Circus"—and glimpsed the hundreds of apartments, halls, storerooms and corridors those ships had become. In rapid succession, he was borne through an ancient Ganymede scow, a Lassell ice borer, a captain's barge, a Callisto heavy cruiser, and a 22nd century fuel transport.

Two centuries of salvage were gathered in this hive—books, costumes, chemicals, tools, and tapes. A crowd around the litter shouting, "Quant suff!" A chorus of savages bleated, "Ammonium bromide . . . gr. 1½, potassium bromide . . . gr. 3, sodium bromide . . . gr. 2, citric acid . . . Quant suff." Foyle fainted.

He awoke in the greenhouse of the asteroid where plants were grown for fresh oxygen. The distant sun blazed through; the air was hot and moist. Foyle gazed around dimly. A devil face peered at him. Cheeks, chin, and eyelids were hideously tatooed like a Maori mask. Across the forehead was tatooed "Joseph."

"We are the Scientific Race," he said. Foyle gazed at the grinning crowd surrounding his litter. All faces were masks; all had names blazoned across them.

"How long did you drift?" Joseph asked.

"Vorga," Foyle mumbled.

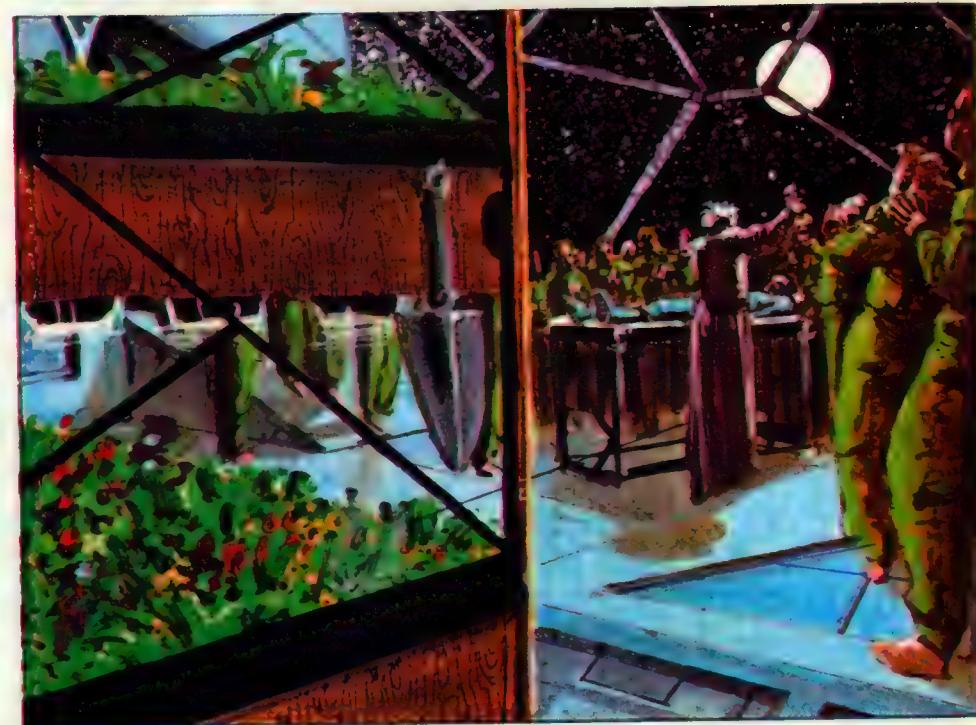

"You are the first man to arrive in fifty years. You are a puissant man. Arrival of the fittest is the doctrine of Holy Darwin. Most scientific."

"Quant suff!" the crowd yelled.

Joseph seized Foyle's elbow in the manner of a physician taking a pulse. "Ninety-eight point-six," he said, producing a thermometer and shaking it reverently. "Most scientific."

"Quant suff!" came the crowd.

Joseph proffered an Erlenmeyer flask labeled, "Lung, Cat. c.s., hematoxylin & eosin." "Vitamin?" he inquired.

Foyle did not respond. Joseph removed a large pill, placed it in the bowl of a pipe, and lit it. He puffed once, then gestured. Three girls appeared before Foyle. Their faces were hideously tatooed Joan, Moira, and Polly. "Select," Joseph said. "The Scientific people practice natural selection. Be scientific in your choice. Be genetic."

As Foyle fainted again, his arm slid off the litter and glanced against Moira.

"Quant suff."

He was in a circular hall filled with a centrifuge, an operating table, a wrecked fluoroscope, autoclaves, and instruments. They strapped Foyle down on the operating table while he raved. They fed him. They shaved him. They bathed him. They turned on the ancient autoclave. It boiled and geysered. They turned on the fluoroscope.

Joseph appeared, a lurid ten-foot tapestry on stilts. He wore a gown embroidered with anatomical illustrations in red and black thread.

"I pronounce you Nomad!" he said.

The uproar was maddening. Joseph tilted a rusty can above Foyle. There was the reek of ether.

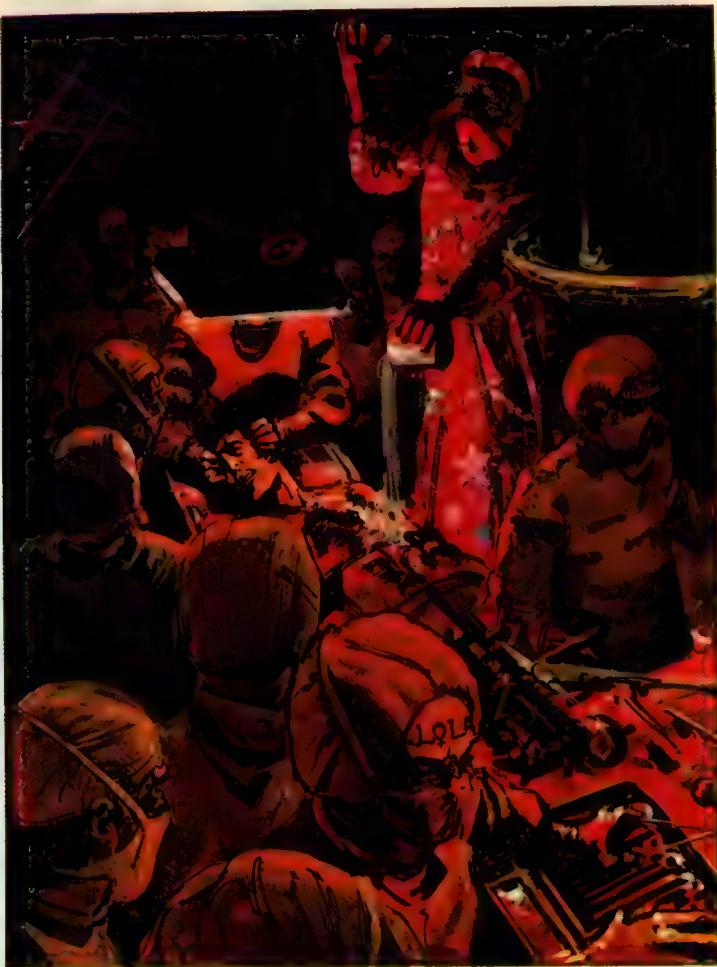

"Scientifically married," Moira said proudly. "I have been inoculated with something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue."

Foyle struggled out of bed. "Where are we now?"

"In our home, Nomad. You must marry every month and have many children. This is scientific."

Foyle ignored her and explored. He was in the main cabin of a small rocket launch. The main cabin had been converted into a bedroom. The control cabin was a parlor, but the controls appeared operative.

He thought.

Foyle lost consciousness. Out of the night "Vorga-T:1139" surged again and again, on a sunward course that burst through Foyle's blood and brains until he could not stop screaming silently for vengeance.

He awoke in a bed. There was silence. The girl, Moira, was with him.

"Who you?" Foyle croaked.

"Your wife, Nomad."

"What?"

He went aft to the kitchen, dismantled the stove. He reconnected fuel tanks to the original jet combustion chambers.

"What are you doing, Nomad?" Moira watched him.

"Got to get out of here, girl," Foyle mumbled. "You dig me? Going to ram out in this boat, is all."

Moira backed away in alarm. Foyle caught the look of her eyes and leaped up. She screamed. Outside, the Scientific People had started banging on the metal hull, a scientific charivari for the newly-weds.

Foyle pursued Moira patiently. He trapped her in a corner. She screamed loud enough to split the asteroid open, but the noise outside was louder. Foyle gagged her with her own clothes.

He returned to the engine room, finished the rough patching job.

"Leaving," he shouted in Moira's ear as he took her to the main hatch. "Take off. Blast right out of asteroid."

He shoved Moira out an open hatch. "Guesses for grabs what happens. Go warn'm. Go girl."

At the controls, Foyle pressed ignition. He waited for the temp to reach firing heat. The launch was cemented into the asteroid. He didn't know what would happen when the jets started their thrust, but he was driven to gamble by "Vorga."

The jets fired. The ship yawned, heated. There was a sharp squeal of metal. Then the launch grated forward, bursting out the asteroid into deep space.

An Inner Planets ship picked him up 90,000 miles outside Mars's orbit. After 7 months of shooting war, they were alert but reckless. The launch seemed abandoned. They went looking for bounty.

They found Foyle, crawling like a worm through the junk-heap. He was ripe with gangrene and bleeding. They put him in solitary sick bay, no sight for even the tough stomachs of the crew.

The I.P. patrol finished its tour of duty. On the jet back to Terra, Foyle recovered consciousness and bubbled words starting with "V". He knew that only time stood between him and vengeance.

A sick bay orderly heard him and parted the curtains of his recovery room. Foyle's filmed eyes looked up.

"What happened?"

"What?" Foyle croaked.

"Don't you know?"

"What? What's a matter, you?"

The orderly jaunted to a supply cabinet and returned five minutes later. Foyle struggled out of the fluid. His eyes blazed. "It's coming back, man. Some of it. I couldn't jaunte on the "Nomad" me. I was off my head."

"You didn't have no head left, you."

"I forgot how to jaunte is all. Still don't remember much. I feel very—"

He recoiled in terror as the orderly thrust the picture of a hideous tattooed face in front of him. It was a Maori mask. Cheeks, chin, eyelids were decorated with stripes and swirls. Across the top was blazoned "NOMAD." Foyle cried out in agony. The picture was a mirror. The face was his own.

a mass for the dead

ONCE UPON A TIME, BEHIND THE CONVENT OF ST. CLAIRE*, THERE LIVED A WIDOW WHO EARNED HER MEAGER LIVING SPINNING YARN. THIS WOMAN WAS VERY DEVOUT. EVERY MORNING SHE WENT TO MASS BEFORE DAWN AT ST. GERVAIS.

ONE WINTER NIGHT, THE WIDOW COULD NOT SLEEP.

THROUGH THE NOISE OF THE WIND, SHE THOUGHT SHE HEARD...

DONG DING DONG

THE BELLS
FOR MASS! I ALREADY!?

DEAR LORD,
I'M GOING TO BE LATE!

THERE WAS NO ONE IN THE STREET... THE NIGHT WAS BLACK AS PITCH...

...YET THE DOORS OF THE CHURCH WERE WIDE OPEN...

...THE ALTAR READY, AND THE CANDLES
LIT.

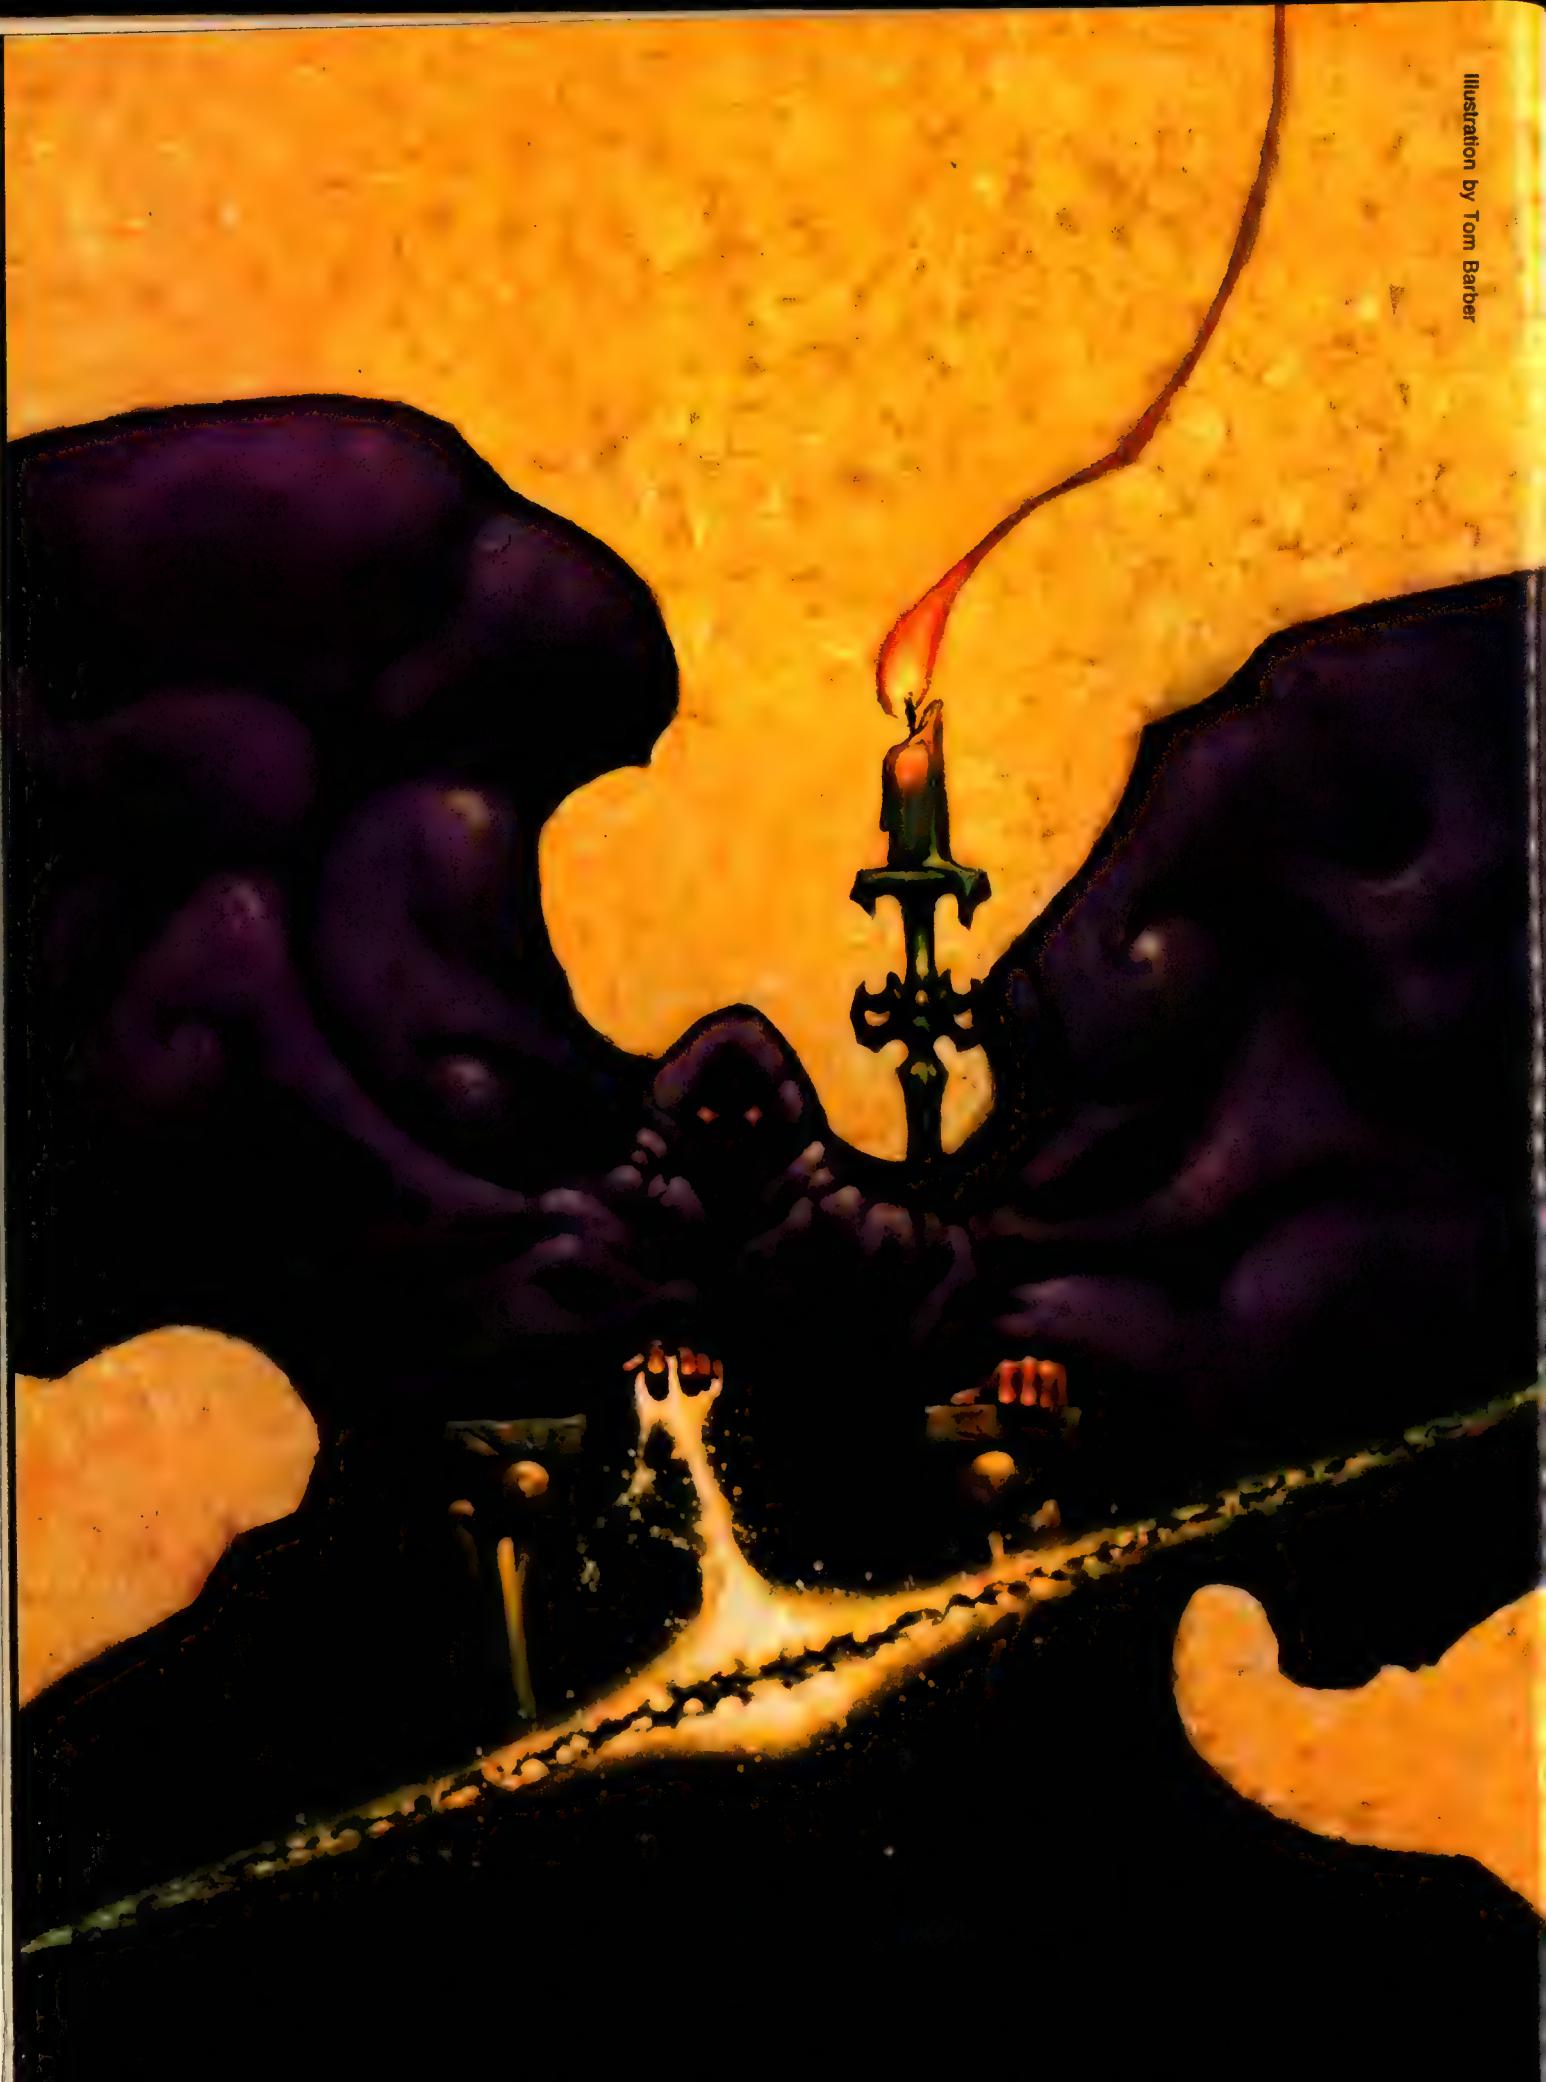

*FORMERLY A CONVENT OF THE POOR CLAIRES, NOW USED AS A BOARDING SCHOOL BY THE NUNS OF THE SACRED HEART.

ДЕХ.

FLOP SWEAT

by Harlan Ellison

Her first guest of the evening sat across the table from her, there in the tiny broadcast booth, staring at her with unreadable green eyes showing through the mask. She was dead certain he was crazy as a thousand battlefields; but he was, without a doubt, one of the best interviews she'd ever had on the program. She knew it without a doubt because her hands were soaking wet with perspiration, and her upper lip above the glossed line of Ultima II was dewy with sweat.

When she had been in the theater, in the years before she had found that hosting a talk show was easier and steadier work, she had come to understand what the perspiration meant. In show biz they called it "flop sweat," the physical manifestation of nervousness just before going on stage. And during the seven years here at KDID, the flop sweat had dampened her palms and upper lip every time she'd had a dynamite show. It was a certain barometer of something happening.

But to call this strange man, dressed all in black, wearing a cheap K-Mart domino mask, the kind children wear at Halloween, a "happening" was to fling oneself face-forward into understatement. Brother Michael Darkness was more than a happening. He was a force of nature, a powerful presence, a disturbing reality; even if he was obviously a certifiable nut-case, a card-carrying whacko, a psychotic in the top one-tenth of the top percentile of emotional walking wounded with whom she shared air-space.

"Reverend Darkness," she said. "it's almost the top of the hour, and we have to break now for the network news, but..."

"Brother Darkness," he said, cutting her off.

She was nonplussed for a moment. His voice. It had the deep, warm, musky timbre of secrets whispered in dark rooms. When he spoke she thought of a stick of butter, squeezed through a fist. "Yes, of course: I'm sorry. You've told me several times you're not a minister. I'll try to remember, Brother Darkness." He nodded politely. She could not read his expression around the mask. He disturbed her fluid ease behind the mike. That didn't happen very often. Seven years at this gig had made her almost unflappable. "What I was about to suggest, Brother Darkness, is that we break for the news and you come back for the second hour of the show. My next guest is Dr. Jacob Theiss, a very well-known psychiatrist who works with the Los Angeles police; he'll be coming on to talk about this epidemic of razor-blade killings...and I think some of what you've been saying about evil in our times might be very interesting to have him comment on."

"I'd be pleased to stay, Miss Ketchum."

The way he said it made Theresa Ketchum almost regret she had suggested it. He made his acceptance sound as if they had entered into some kind of unholy alliance. But she signaled to Jerry, the engineer in the control room, and he turned up the network feed pot, and the news rushed in with drums and trumpets and the voice of the sixty-thousand-dollar-a-year announcer from New York.

Now she was alone with Brother Darkness. The on-air studio in which they sat was a claustrophobic box, fifteen by ten, with two windowed walls: one side looked into the control room; the other looked into the waiting room where Millie sat taking and screening phone calls from the general public. The studio seemed somehow smaller than usual, and throat-cogglingly filled with menace. And it had started out being such a lovely day.

She took off her earphones and racked them. She stood up, smoothing her skirt, and was suddenly aware of Brother Darkness looking at her not as a dispassionate "communicaster," but as an attractive woman, thirty-four years old, body tanned and well-toned from afternoons at the Beverly Hills Health Club, nose bobbed exquisitely by Dr. Parks, auburn hair coddled and cozened just so at Jon Peters's parlor in the Valley. She had a momentary flash of regret at not having worn something bulky and concealing. The blouse was too sheer, the skirt too tight, the whole image too provocative. But she had dressed for after the broadcast, for the party CBS was hosting that night at the Bonaventure to promote its new mid-season sitcom. The party at which she would use the sensual good looks, the tanned and well-toned body, the exquisite nose and brushfire hair to play some ingratiating politics: to move herself out of a seven-year rut on local talk radio and into a network job. Dressing with care this afternoon, before coming in to the station, she had given no thought to the effect on her guests: only to how she would present herself at the party. Attention where it mattered.

But Brother Michael Darkness was staring at her the way men stared at her in the Polo Lounge or in the meat-rack pickup bar of the Rangoon Racquet Club. And she wished she were wearing a caftan, a fur-lined parka, a severe three-piece tweed pant suit.

"Would you like a cup of coffee?" She heard her voice coming thickly and distantly. Not at all the liquid honey tone she used as the trademark of an audio sex object when broadcasting.

"No thank you, Miss Ketchum. I'll just sit here, if that's all right."

She nodded. "Yes, of course. That'll be fine. I'll go get Dr. Theiss and be right back. We have five minutes before we're back on the air." And she escaped into the corridor quickly, finding herself leaning against the sea-green wall breathing very deeply.

Over the station speakers in the hall the newscaster was headlining the Los Angeles razor-blade slayings, commenting on the discovery that morning of an eleventh young woman, nude and with throat sliced open, in the bushes near the Silverlake off-ramp of the Hollywood Freeway. She heard the voice, but paid no attention.

She stepped into the waiting room beside the studio. Jake Theiss was leaning against the wall sipping coffee from a paper cup. The telephone switchboard was lit from one end to the other, all ten lines strobing with urgency. Millie looked up from the log and rolled her eyes. "Jesus, Terri, you've got a live one tonight. They're crawling down the wires to talk to him."

She felt her heart racing. "Keep the best ones on hold; I'll try to get to them after I introduce Jake."

Then she turned to Jake Theiss, who smiled at her, and it was as if someone had returned her stolen security blanket. He had been on the show a dozen times before, and they had even gone out several evenings. His mere presence reassured her.

"Theresa," he said, stepping away from the wall and taking her hand, "you look a trifle whiplashed."

She hugged him and kissed his cheek. "My God, Jake, have you been listening to him?"

The psychiatrist nodded slowly. "I have indeed. But it's not so much what he says, as the way he says it. A little de Sade, a little Gilles de Rais, echoes of Proterius, a smidgeon of Cotton Mather, and some direct quotes from the Evangelium Nicodemi, if memory serves well. All made contemporary by the addition of Jung, Freud, Adler, and Werner Erhard's look-out-for-number-one. Nothing particularly spectacular there, most modern demonologists plunder the same bag. But your Brother Michael in there has a sense of the dramatic, and a voice to match, and a nasty way of bringing in current events that...well...I can't say I'm looking forward to sharing a microphone with him."

She drew a deep breath. "Jake, stop it! This flake does a good enough job scaring the hell out of me on his own. I mean, it's like Exorcist time in there. When he starts talking about the return of the devils I swear to God I can feel the slimy things in that booth. And I never thought a kid's Halloween mask could chill me, but each time he looks at me with those green eyes I feel every part of my body trying to run away and leave my head behind."

Millie handed her a Kleenex from the box. "Your lip," she said. Theresa took the tissue and blotted herself.

"Okay, don't worry about it," Jake said, setting down the empty coffee cup. "I'll come on like the voice of rationality."

She smiled wanly, feeling like a fool. This was hardly professional behavior.

They walked back into the on-air studio just as the news was ending. Theresa moved to the console and flipped the toggle switch on the intercom. "Jerry, let's do the Southern California Buick dealers, Pacific Telephone, and Roto-Rooter. Is there a live tag on the Roto-Rooter commercial?"

The tinny voice of Jerry from the other side of the control room glass filled the booth. "Yeah. Ten seconds."

He ran up the cartridges and for a moment, before she turned down the sound in the booth, the Buick announcer's voice filled the air. When she turned back to her guests, Jake Theiss had already seated himself at the empty third mike, to the right of her swivel chair. She drew a deep breath and sat down. "Jake, this is Brother Michael Darkness; Brother Darkness, Dr. Jacob Theiss." She watched them shake hands. She studied Jake's face closely, but if he reacted to the touch of Brother Michael's hand, as she had reacted the first time he had touched her, the only time he had touched her, earlier that evening, the psychiatrist concealed the fact. Jake did not shiver. He smiled at Brother Michael and said, "I've been listening to the interview. Pretty strong medicine for a lay audience just around dinnertime, wouldn't you say?"

Brother Michael's face was impassive. "If you think I'm a fraud, Dr. Theiss, why not just come out with it. Mendacity is unappealing in someone who professes to being a man of science. Even such an alleged science as the study of the mind!"

Theresa's heart beat faster. It was as though she had just received two separate and powerful electrical shocks, so close together they seemed one: outrage and fear at the antagonism of the man in black, which might lead in a moment to a thrown punch; and delight at the instant animus between Jake and the Brother, guaranteeing a controversial second hour for the show. She hated herself for feeling pleasure, but it was always this way when something terrible but promotable happened on the show.

"I didn't know you also read minds, Brother Darkness," Jake said, swallowing the affront. "If I wanted to call you a fraud, I'd certainly wait till we were on the air."

Brother Michael's tone softened. He knew he wasn't going to get a fight. Not now, at any rate. "I'm pleased to know you recognize the apocryphal texts. Too few practitioners of what you call 'the healing arts' familiarize themselves with the black documents of antiquity."

Theresa was lost.

"I beg your pardon, what do you mean?" Jake said.

"I mean: you were correct in recognizing my quote from the Evangelium Nicodemum."

A chill spread its web across Theresa's back. Jake had said that in the waiting room. How could Brother Michael have heard it? She reached over and flipped the toggle for Millie. "Did we leave the intercom feed open?" Millie shook her head no. Theresa stared at her through the glass. The chill spread deeper and farther. She looked at Jake with confusion.

He caught the look. "A condemned document dating from the third century. It describes Christ's descent into hell and a session of Satan's sanhedrin, his court."

The Roto-Rooter jingle was just ending and Theresa held up a hand for silence as she rifled through the sheaf of tags for commercials, and simultaneously punched the square red button that gave her a live microphone.

"So say good-bye forever to clogged drains caused by those tree roots that've grown into pipes. Get to the root of your problem by calling your Roto-Rooter service representative..." She conversationalized the written tag, reading it with warmth and friendly understatement, but all the while keeping her eye on her guests.

"Well, we're back with Brother Michael Darkness, the head of the Euchite Sect, a group we're told has no affiliation with any orthodox or recognized religious denomination; a man who says he represents those who believe in the return of the dark forces that once ruled the earth. And we're being joined now by Dr. Jacob Theiss, M.D., Ph.D., a member of the governing board of the American Psychiatric Association. He's on the staff at the UCLA Medical Center, and the winner of many prestigious awards in the field of human behavior. Dr. Theiss, have you been listening to the interview so far?"

"Yes, Theresa. And I'm most intrigued by Brother Darkness and what he's been saying. But I think you're mistaken when you say that the Euchites are an unrecognized sect."

"Brother Darkness, correct me if I'm wrong, but weren't the Euchites an early Christian sect who believed that each man had a congenital devil that could be expelled only by constant prayer? They were supposed to have repudiated the sacraments and moral law, to have worshiped Lucifer as the oldest son of the Creator, isn't that right? About twelfth century, if I remember correctly?"

Brother Michael leaned forward till his face almost touched the microphone. "Very good, Dr. Theiss. I'm pleased and surprised at your erudition. Quite correct, on every point."

"And you're reviving this sect here in Los Angeles, in the middle of the Age of Plastic?"

"When better? The time is right."

"What do you mean by that?" Theresa said.

"Just look around," Brother Michael said softly. "Everywhere a belief in the irrational and the obscure takes greater hold daily. Films tell us we are being watched by aliens from other worlds, or that demons infest the night; there is a frenzied rush to believe in astrology, in demonology and assassination conspiracies, in superstition and magic; we seek Messiahs on all sides: Atlantis, the Bermuda Triangle, lost worlds at the center of the earth, spirits speaking from the grave; Eastern mysticism...they dominate our every waking moment and plunge through our dreams at night. Do you think this is accidental? No, I'm sure you don't. You may be confused and frightened by it all, but in some secret part of your mind and your soul you understand that it is the first clarion call of the ancient devils, come again to rule us. As is only right and proper."

And they were off. Theresa barely had time to get in the live commercials required by the log and the FCC. She had to run them in clusters, knowing her listeners were pounding furiously on the busy telephone lines. Jake and the Brother went at it fiercely, with Jake trying to hold a line of logic and sanity against the ferocious dynamics of Brother Darkness's statements.

The first of the calls came in at twenty after the hour.

"Okay, let's take a break from this for a moment," Theresa said. "Wheew! You two make my head spin. Let's hear what our listeners have to say. Dr. Theiss, Brother Darkness, if you'll use those headsets you'll be able to hear the caller. Okay. Hello, this is Theresa Ketchum and you're on KDID talk radio. Who's this?"

The voice that came across the line was strangely unisex, neither male nor female, identifiable neither as young nor old. It seemed to be coming from a great distance, though it was clear and precise. "This is someone all of Los Angeles wants to know" the voice said. "I'm responsible for the razor-blade cleansings. You call them slayings, but I assure you, they're cleansings."

Through the glass, Millie's face filled with horror.

She grabbed for the private line and dialed. Theresa saw her frantic movements and knew at once she was dialing the police emergency number, 911. Thank God Millie was on tonight, and not Charlie, who was so slow on the uptake that he often patched through rambling dingbats.

"Come on, whoever you are," Theresa said, stalling for time so the police could trace back across the phone company's machinery to the line on which this self-proclaimed killer was speaking, "we know there are enough cuckoos out there who like to confess to crimes to fill the Forum. Why should we believe you're the razor-blade killer?"

"It isn't necessary that you believe. But here's a bit of information the police have been holding back: when I perform my cleansing operations, I always cut a pentangle into the sole of the left foot of my sacrifices."

He went on speaking, but Theresa saw Jake signaling her frantically. She hit the green button killing the live mike, and Jake gasped, "It's him! Or her! I can't tell which! But that's even been kept out of the coroner's reports!"

"How do you know?"

"For God's sake, Terri, I'm working with the LAPD on this! It's the killer, I tell you!"

She punched the mike to life. "Why are you calling us?"

The voice went on carefully, very steadily, "I just wanted to say it would serve you to listen to what Brother Darkness is saying. He's right, you know."

The most violent reaction came from Brother Michael Darkness. He grabbed the boom on the mike and pulled the instrument to him. "Whoever you are...you've got to stop this...it's awful...it's not right...you're a sick person..."

But the line went dead. The dial tone came over the open mike.

They sat there in silence, knowing that all over Los Angeles pandemonium was gripping the thousands of listeners to this program; knowing that if the station management was listening they were already calling in on the private lines to find out why the four and one-half second time-delay intercept hadn't been used; knowing that the police were on their way to the station; knowing that out there somewhere a lunatic was being primed to kill again. Surely that was what this portended. Another slaughter.

She didn't know what to say. For the first time in seven years she was too terrified and too stunned to let her sense of theatrics override her shock. But Jake had already jumped in.

"Brother Michael, do you know that person?"

"I swear to you, I have never heard that voice. I don't want you to think that my beliefs or the sect I represent have anything to do with murder."

"But that person, male or female - I can't tell which - that person says your doctrine is correct. That speaker was an adherent of what you profess. Now do you see what your insane, your profane doctrine leads to? Chaos! Lunacy! It makes it all right for madmen to kill innocent people!"

And Millie was waving frantically from the other side of the glass, signaling Theresa to pick up line three.

She punched up line three and started to say, "You're on KDID talk radio..." but the voice from the night came once again. "Don't try to trace me; you'll have no luck. I just want you to know that it all begins and ends tonight."

Theresa heard herself gasp, and then she barely managed to say, "What do you mean?"

And the voice said, "It's all coming together tonight. Have you looked out at the moon. It's full tonight. And everything you people believe, all the mad things, all the terrible things, all the things Brother Darkness calls 'the irrational' come together. Belief in the dark things, the ancient fears, the crazy things you all believe in your souls really move the universe...all of it has become strong enough for the end of my cleansing labors...and the beginning of the Apocalypse."

And the mike went dead again.

Theresa cut in Millie's intercom. "Where did that come from?"

Millie was crying. "That was line three, from Orange County. But the first one was an L.A. line. It can't be!"

Jake's face was white with fear. "Oh, my God," he said, very quietly, the words trembling with terror.

Brother Michael was babbling, saying over and over, "I had nothing to do with it, nothing...I don't know him...I swear I didn't mean any harm..."

And as the hour wore to a close, there were two more calls. One on a line from Long Beach, the other on a line originating in Glendale. It was impossible for anyone to get from one of those far areas to another in the space of minutes; yet it was the same voice, and it happened.

And when the police came they took Brother Michael away. And Jake went with them, to help coordinate the mobilization of every available cop in the city. And when the hour ended Theresa was left sitting in the booth, shaking with terror.

Party tonight? No, not possible. No party tonight. Perhaps no party any night. That voice, the calm in the words, the certainty. Tonight: the Apocalypse. And one word from the razor blade killer's last message: Armageddon. The final battle between good and evil, the last battle between the forces of the Creator and the dark demons who had been banished before man walked the Earth.

"Terri, I'm going home now."

It was Millie's voice from the other side of the glass. The control room was empty. Jerry had gone. Theresa looked up dazedly, nodded once, and tried to rise. She found she had lost the strength to leave this terrible little box, at least for the moment. "Go ahead, Millie; I'll see you tomorrow." She let her hand lie on the console after releasing the toggle. Millie left.

She knew there were other people in the building. In other studios, KDID was carrying on; even in the face of what had gone out over the air tonight. She found that she was too frightened to leave, to go out through the corridors, past the security desk, into the parking lot with its high wire fence, to get into her car all alone, and to drive across town to her apartment. No. She would stay here. Safe in the booth. Locked away from whatever might happen tonight.

There was a faint light in the empty control room.

She looked through the glass, strained forward to see what it was, moving toward her. A faint purple light, soft and blurred, like a fading bruise on battered flesh. And now another light, in the glass of the waiting room on the other side of the studio. She stared from one to another, watching them moving slowly toward the glass partitions. Now another light in the control room. And another. Two more in the waiting room.

There was a rumbling beneath her feet. The studio trembled with the reverberation of an impact in the earth. Through the sound-proofed walls came the dull roar of explosions. Temblors rippled the floor: the vinyl tiles buckled around her feet.

The faint lights moved closer. Figures coming toward the glass. Stopping to stare in at her. Figures in long black garments, with drawn cowls that covered their faces. And strange, sickly purple light, the faintest, most terrible glow, shining out from beneath the cowls. They stared in at her. She could see no eyes: but they were staring in at her.

They raised their arms slightly, slowly, and the sleeves of their black robes fell back, revealing their hands. Theresa found that she could not breathe, that her chest was convulsing with the pain of her wildly beating heart.

Their fingers did not end in flesh. Metal. Sharp, cold metal; thin and final. This was the answer to how phone calls from the same person could come from distant sources.

There was the sound of movement just outside the door of the studio. The walls shook with the echoes of the cataclysm outside. The roaring was louder now.

And in the moment before the door opened she had the final, petrifying thought that she had been part of it all, had spread the doctrine of irrationality and superstition every night for seven years, had given a platform to every demented True Believer whose wild fantasies might build her audience.

And now her worshipers had come to sacrifice their very own prophet. She felt cold and dead already, could feel the chill slice of the thin, metal fingertips. Her palms were soaked with sweat in expectation of the final performance.

The door opened, and they filed in to fill the studio. They stood staring at her as she felt her life clog up in her throat and arteries. They raised their arms, and the sleeves fell back from pale flesh and metal fingertips. She waited for the first touch.

And they sank to their knees, lifting their arms in supplication. She began to tremble with the rictus of a scream shaking her like a fever. Now she knew the worst, now she understood:

She was not to die. She had broadcast the word for them, every night for seven years, and she was not to die. She would be their dark priestess. Like the others who had done their spadework, like the others who had spread the word, she was to be kept alive, perhaps forever.

Dark priestess in a world of desolation, ruled by devils, cleansed of humanity. She would not die!

More ruinous than death: to rule forever in Hell. Lovelessly alive; worshiped by eaters of the darkness. To live on, coated always with a cold sweat, through a final performance that had no curtain, no exit lines.

Her scream could have shattered glass, but it didn't; it merely resonated against the metal fingertips of her subjects, her masters.

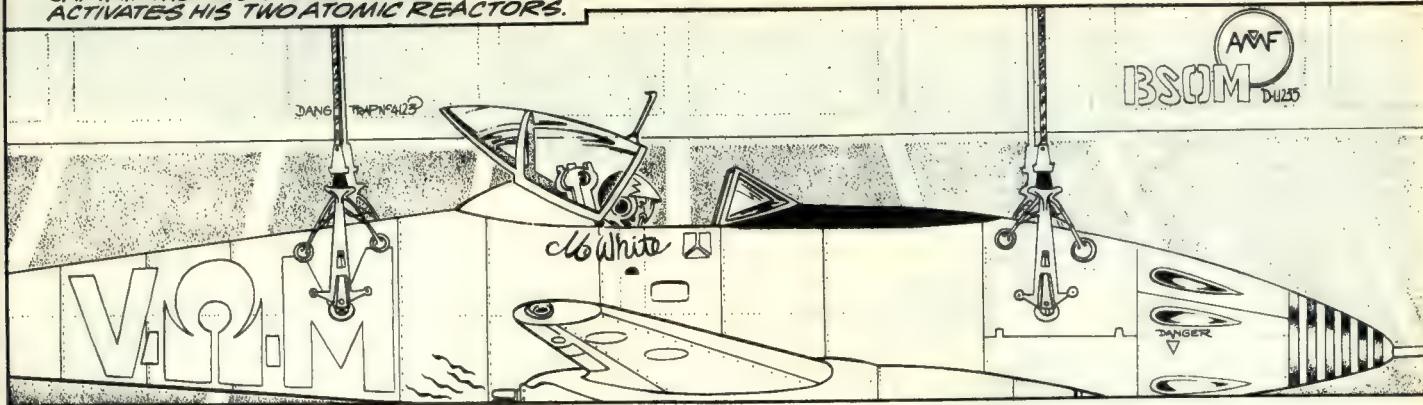

From the burning world beyond the studio came the wind whisper of the plague of locusts.

THE GREAT JIRAP

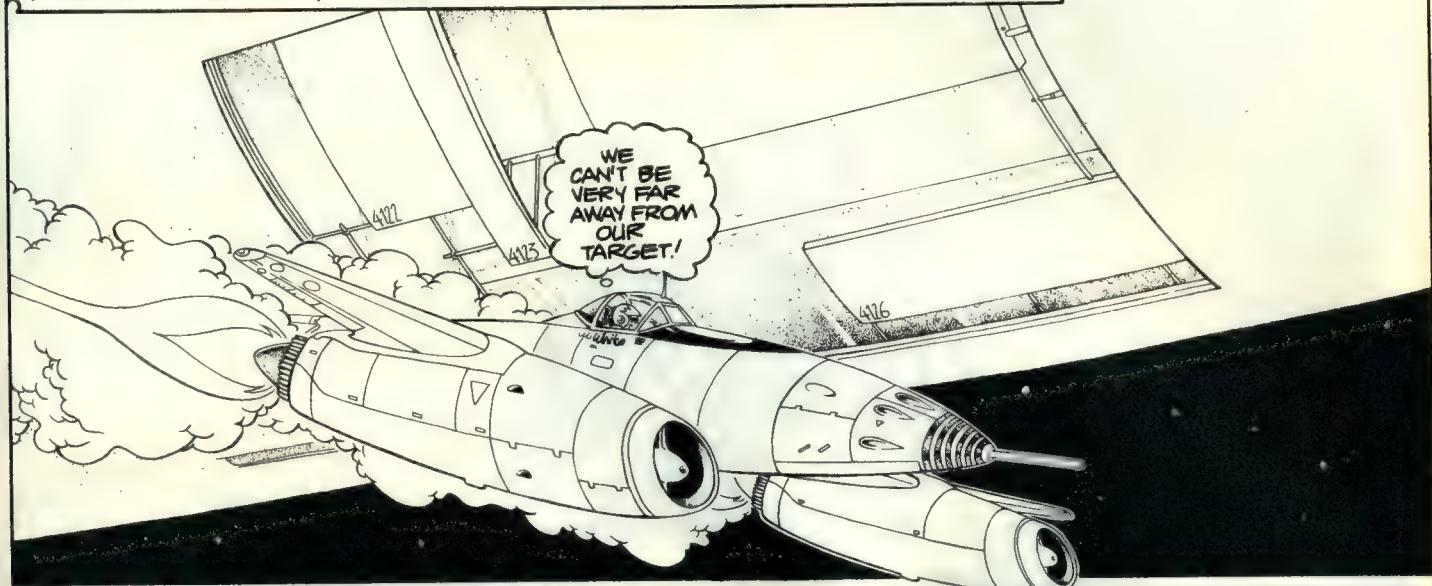

OUR STORY SO FAR: JIM KILLED HIMSELF UPON ENTERING THE COSMIC INTERFERENCE ZONE OF THE DIABOLICAL PLANET, TO WHICH THE LITTLE SQUADRON OF CAPTAIN WHITE MUST LAY SIEGE...

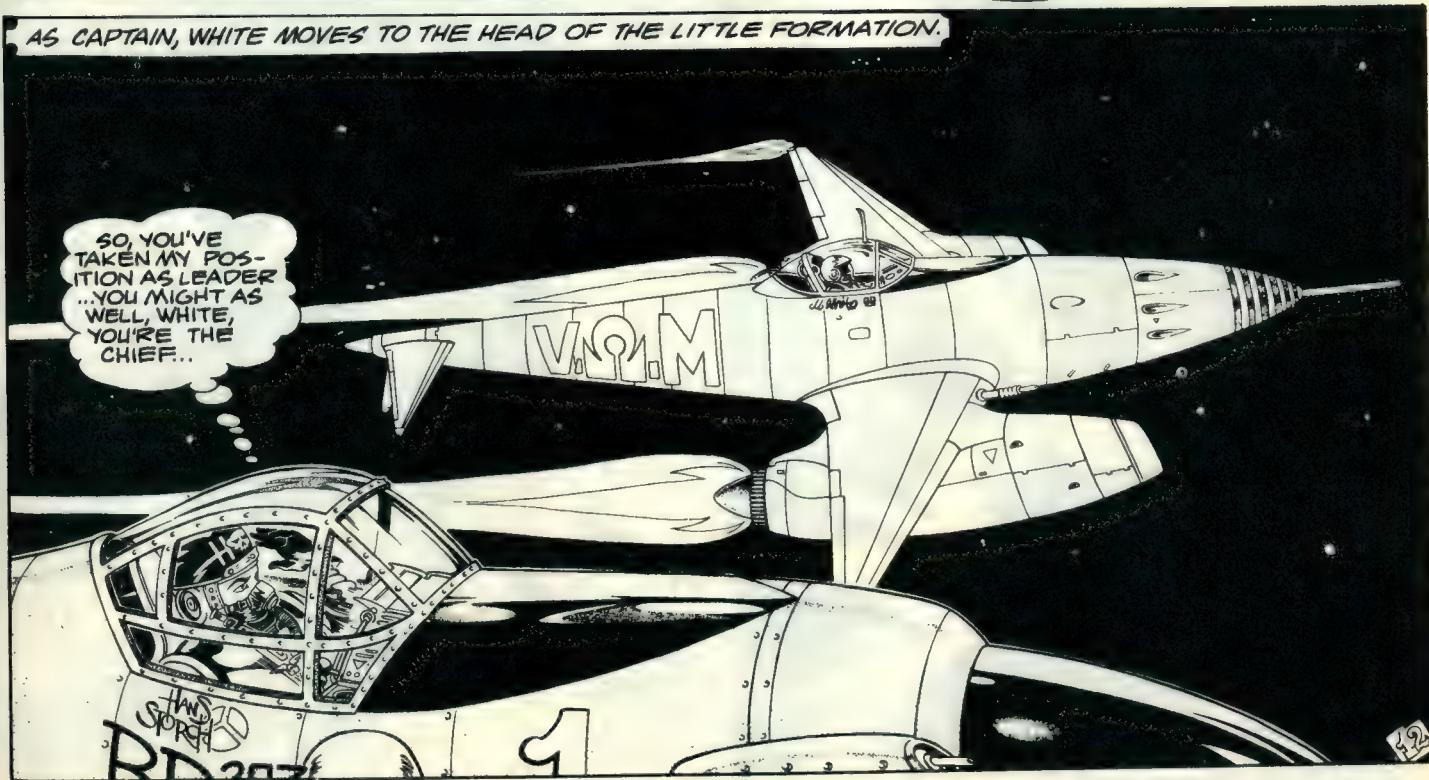

CAPTAIN MORRIS WHITE POSITIONS HIMSELF AT THE COMMANDS OF HIS "DEFIANT-A.S." AND ACTIVATES HIS TWO ATOMIC REACTORS.

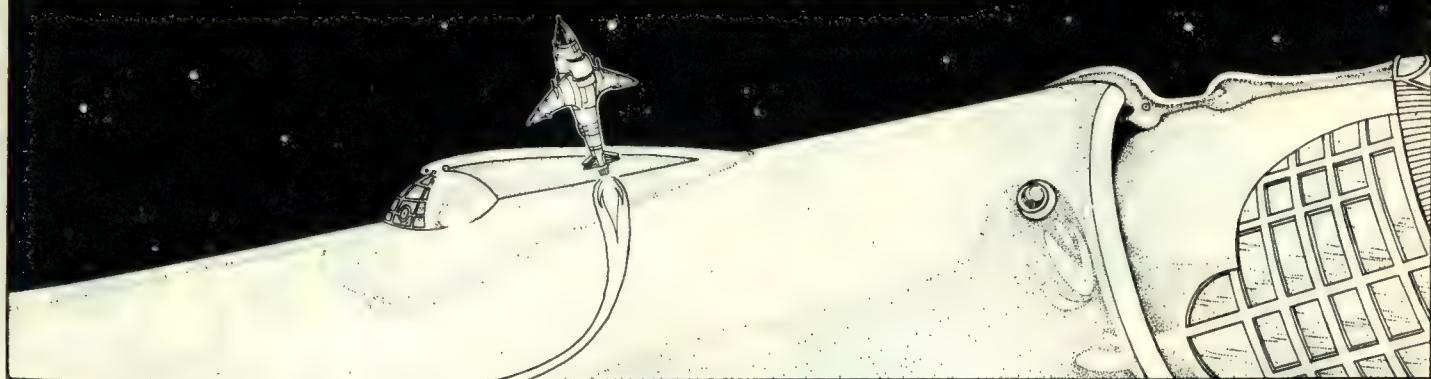

THREE MINUTES LATER, THE POLYVALENT FIGHTER LEAVES THE "DUKE U-235."

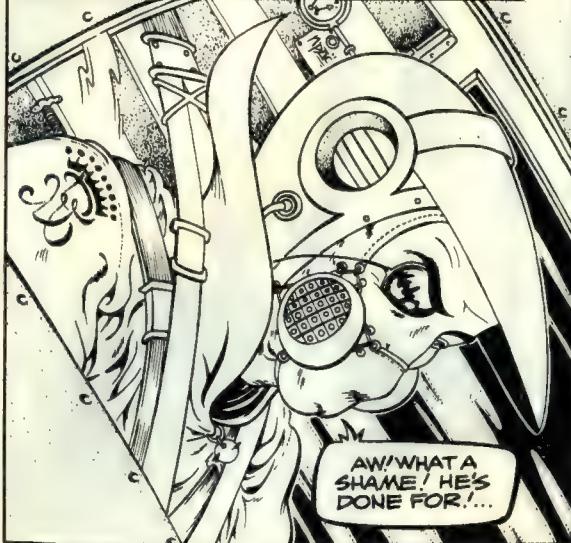

AS CAPTAIN, WHITE MOVES TO THE HEAD OF THE LITTLE FORMATION.

ETHAN KANFER EXPECTS TO BE RELIEVED BY COMMANDER HANS STORCH.

BUT TEN THOUSAND FEET HIGHER, A WRETCHED SIS* CENTURION POLICES ON HIM!!!

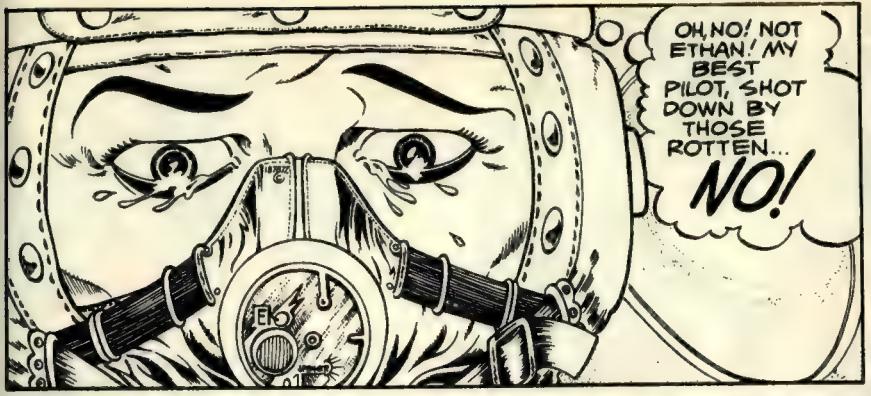

*SPATIAL INTERVENTION SQUADRON

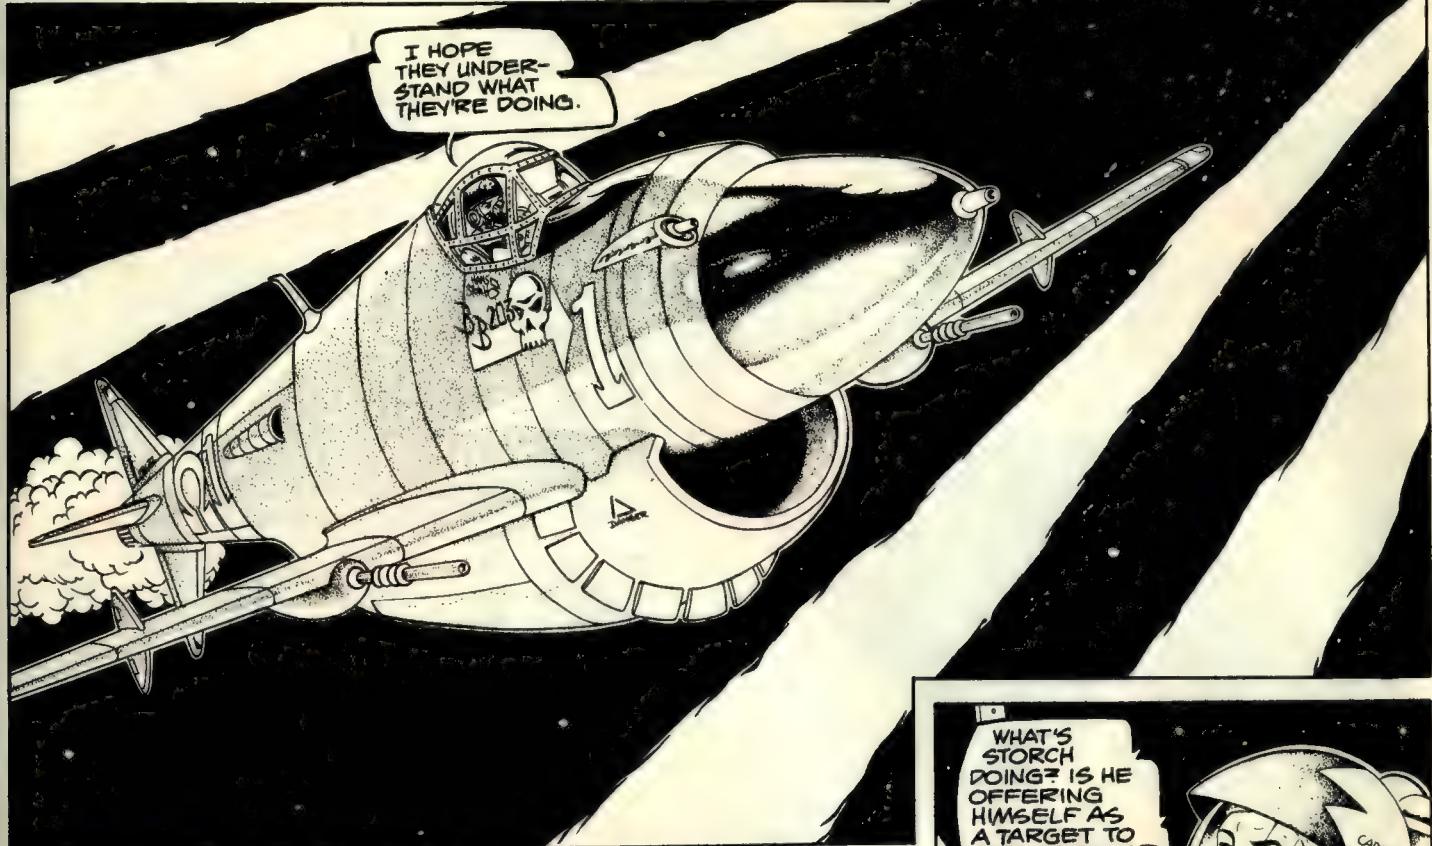

THE TERRIBLE BURNING RAY HITS THE ATOMIC BATTERY OF THE BEE-BUL... WHICH EXPLODES!

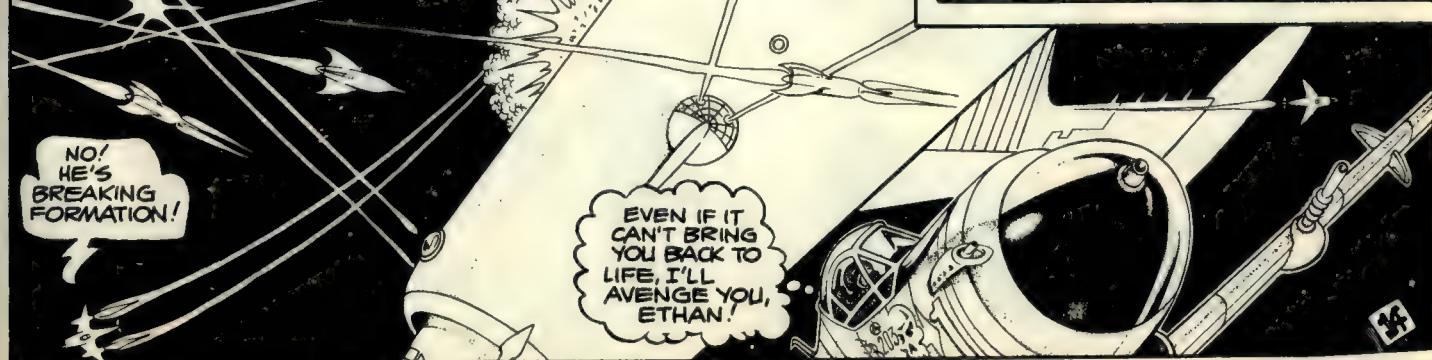

INSIDE THE "DUKE" THE SIREN ALERT RESOUNDS STRANGELY THROUGH THE METALLIC STRUCTURE...

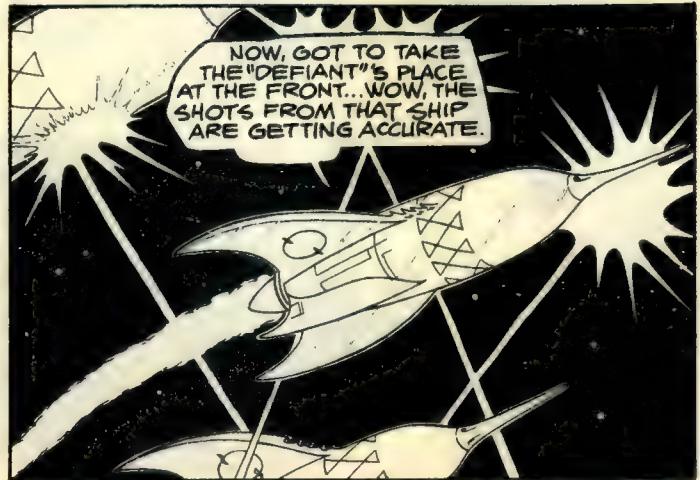

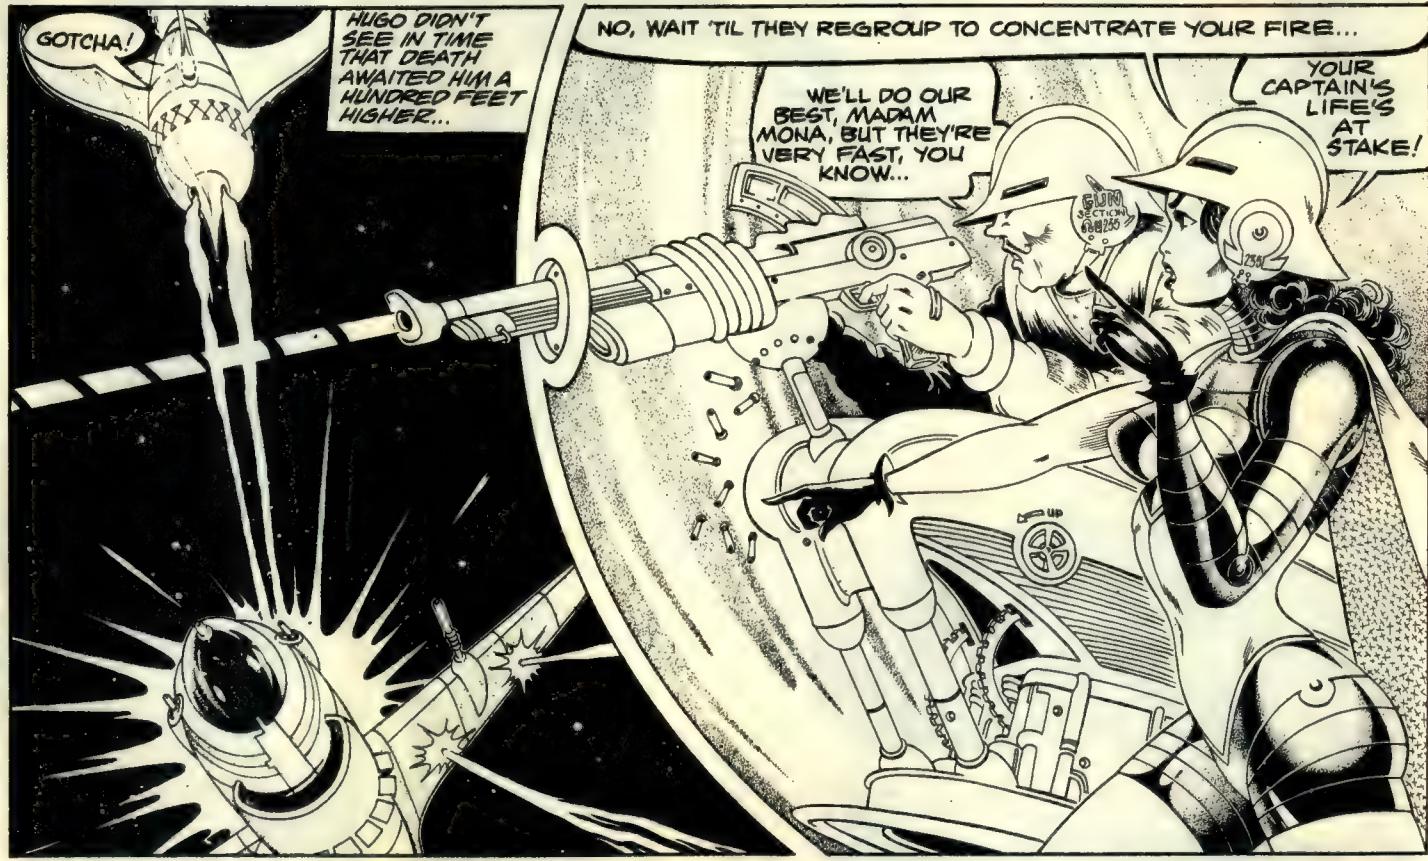

COMMANDER STORCH SCARCELY HAS TIME TO GET SENTIMENTAL ABOUT THE FATE OF HIS MATE, AS HE ESCAPES THE ACCURATE SHOT OF THE SIS'S SECOND ATTACK OF BURNING RAYS!!

THE FIGHTERS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE OPENING LEFT BY HANS STORCH TO ATTACK THE "DUKE-U-235."

"Ha! Machines are supposed to wander, not wonder! We are living in 'civilized times,'" Flan laughed, quoting one of the Galactic Federation's favorite slogans. "War – and the warbot – are obsolete. Besides," and again he stared thoughtfully out of the port, "we'll be facing war of a different sort tonight at the royal dinner – verbal thrust and counterstroke amid lace and candle-light."

Mark checked his holo image: the high-waisted, midnight blue mariner dress trousers, properly bloused; tunic molded to his solid frame, the Sunheart pendant hanging like a splinter of frozen lightning against his chest; pistol, saline ampoules, and chuff-club lashed to his belt.

Not bad for a wandering Spacer – or the unwilling heir to a throne of Empire, he told himself as he pushed back a restless lock of coalsack hair. A tiny translucent duplicate of himself, almost five inches tall, stood on the rotating hologram platform, aping his every move. He studied his light-twin. The figure did look thin, perhaps even a bit haggard. His mother, the Empress, would no doubt comment on that.

He found his mind slipping free once again as the curving, seamless walls of the ship dissolved in a black mist. Once again he was in the drag cage, suspended between suns, pacing off the endless star watches....

" – GO!" The warbot was already half-way down the tunnel, muttering to itself. Sighing, Flan grabbed a mask and caught up just as the hatch separated into four wedge sections.

SPAR CROWN

BY JOHN POCSIK

PART II

Blasts of superheated air hammered at his body. Enveloped in the stark light, Flan Sunheart sagged in the airlock, waiting for the nausea to pass as his body adjusted to the high temperature. He felt the press of Ilium's greater gravity in his bones. Even his mask's element filter could not prevent the sour reek of the nearby decaying sea from penetrating.

He was sorry to be leaving the ship. The Omega Wing had been home for the two of them for almost four hundred solar days. True, there had been times when they had both wished they were anywhere else but imprisoned in the sleek monofin craft – hours of boredom, sleeplessness, and the ever-present "cockpit nerves." But the Wing had never failed them; it had proven a warm and comfortable sanctuary in the eternal night of space. Now, however, it seemed abandoned, lifeless, and the moment ineffably sad.

"This is no time for sentiment," PEW grated, brushing past him. "I can't wait to be off this boat."

Sunheart remained where he was, feeling the solidity of his ship. His ship! The best modified scouter in the entire Galactic fleet. The techs would have the Wing refitted within hours: the ion drive pulled and checked out, solar vane settings calibrated, the in-space computer programs enhanced by new data.

He felt better, although his lungs still seemed on fire. Sweat was oozing from his pores – a perfectly normal reaction. The wind lashed his hair. Setting his eye lenses for maximum shade, he started to descend the ramp carefully. PEW was some distance below him, meshing downgear loudly.

♦ we have company ♦

The telepathic twang made him raise his heavy head.

A dark mass of men stood waiting at the bottom of the ramp – two rows of black-garbed Imperial Security Service agents – sensodim rifles held against their armored chests in a vague approximation of salute. Visor-protected, eyeless, faceless, their presence seemed menacing in the blazing afternoon.

Their leader stamped forward. Unlike the rest, he carried only a short gray metal rod, whose crimson tip was blinking. The intricate, twining design of the House of Mord – the house of Nekron Corona, Lord-Commander of the Imperial Armada of Ilium Prime – was highly visible on his left shoulder; strangely, the youth noticed, the Sunheart crest was missing from his right. The name on his polished helmet read SPAR 777 – CPT (Maserman).

He cleared his throat as a cloud of dust rolled in upon them.

"Offworlders are required by the regulators of Ilium Prime to present themselves for inspection. Your craft will be searched; illegal material – so defined by Federation laws – will be confiscated, and such charges as are deemed fit and prudent will be rendered. Hand over your life reader and shipmaster's papers."

PEW veered toward the guardsmen; they had to break formation to get out of his path.

Smiling amiably, Flan spoke so softly that only the man facing him could hear.

"Captain Spar, look at my pendant. It is the ancient design of the Sunhearts, who have been the guardians and servants of the Starcrown for more than five hundred years. By that law which you've just cited, you too should be wearing this symbol, for you stand in the service of Alidin Sunheart, lord of this planet and Adjudicator Imperex of the Whorl System. I am his son, and thus your potential ruler, and while it is not my habit to flaunt this fact of biological accident, nothing would give me greater pleasure at this moment than to see you flinching at my feet for your insolence! Is this the way you greet visitors to my father's world?"

Spar 777's lips began to quiver; his eyes showing barely restrained anger.

"My Lord Corona has issued very specific orders concerning all arriving spacecraft..."

"And as we both know, my Lord Corona has aspirations to rule this planet. But first he must rule the Sunhearts, and this he does not do. So, in the name of your Emperor, my father, I rescind those orders. Have you anything further to say to me, Captain, before we melt in this heat? Form your men up while we wait for my escort."

The officer's jaw flexed, showing a hint of dark metal just beneath the dead skin where a graft had not healed properly. Slowly, the man removed his glare-spex. Weak eyes, was Sunheart's first thought.

◇ watch his hand ◆ came PEW's warning.

Spar's fist rose, rod poised to strike. "Don't!" Sunheart commanded.

Both figures stood tensed for one instant more, then Spar's eyes began to dart nervously about; his arm fell limply to his side (rod tip sparking against the landing grid), and he sagged, beaten, within his glossy leathers. Turning on his heel, he signaled for his men to form up while they waited for the screamcar bearing the Sunheart insignia to settle.

◇ i will not forget this landing if i survive to two hundred : : : something is not right here : : : there has not been this much security since the behemoth wars. ◆

While the drivers were hoisting the warbot into the car's chilly interior, Sunheart paused to grin back at Spar. The maserman was speaking urgently into a voxbox. Shaking his head, the youth swung himself into the car. A copper-skinned girl with sea-green hair – a novice of the Far Sight sect – knelt before him, eyes lowered, proffering a vessel of precious water and a purple, gold-bordered towel. The doors hissed shut and the screamcar swept forward at top speed, soundless as an intake of breath. The Omega Wing, the black knot of figures, the hovering Armada transports receded swiftly, were lost in the haze and glare.

And echoing the warbot's query, his own:
What is going on here?

" – busy. Rouyn and I have been working with the Mords on the contracts for mining operations in the Glavas Crevasse. Though pi-gamma ore technically belongs to us, we've had to go through some fairly complex negotiations. . . ."

◆ switch me on when this is over :: my circuits will not take this ◆

PEW became motionless, activity indicators dimming.

Cradled in an observation bubble, high above the teeming streets of Ilium Prime, Flan Sunheart watched rivers of cobalt darkness flowing through the city canyons. On all sides, the solar spires flashed blindingly gold and crimson as they turned to catch the final rays of the setting suns. But down in those vertiginous depths, it looked cold, almost alien.

Melancholy was sitting at his left shoulder again.

PEW, as usual, had the right idea; when things got too boring, the machine simply switched itself off, preferring instead the music of the spheres? blue noise? white silences?

Sunheart and his half-brothers – Rouyn and Oromocto – had been enduring each other's company while waiting for the procession to end. The evening's celebrations in honor of the Empress's birthday – his main reason for returning – had actually begun before noon and were only now reaching a peak.

Perhaps, he told himself as he sipped nearfoam – the goblet frosting to his touch – perhaps it was just the City itself and all the associations which it rekindled. He cherished no overond memories of his Court upbringing, calling to mind instead those odd and interesting moments of training in the more esoteric matters of Empire – trench navigation, stellar cartography, and solidity transfer – which he had received from old Polonius Gaul, his father's most trusted counsellor.

A troupe of gravity gymnasts floated by, carrying a techtronic bead mosaic of his mother. It did feel good to be able to stretch out at full length on the undulant cushions, Flan thought as he let his heavy eyelids droop.

“ – a small step in the Federation's study of colonization possibilities within the C-Quare system. . .” Oromocto was saying. The liquor actually scalded his throat, making him choke and his eyes water. Not used to drinking either, he thought ruefully. It seemed as if he had been listening to the accounts of his brothers' intrigues and manipulations for hours.

“Funny,” Rouyn said during one of the many lulls in the conversation. “It's funny how you uncannily show up the same time every year with your tales and your treasures, to stay just long enough so you can ingratiate yourself with Father before you go flying off again.”

“Yes – while we do the dirty work for you!” Oromocto added, disdainfully. “An easy way to gain the crown, it seems to me.”

Flan smiled, his eyes still closed. He could well imagine the hostile expressions on both their faces. How they had changed since the last time he had seen them, he thought. Their hatred and jealousy toward him was apparent in every word and action. True, there had never been much love lost between them – he being Alidin Sunheart's only naturally-born child, but still he felt the ties of blood. . . .

“I don't want the Starcrown,” he answered in a quiet voice. “Fight for it between yourselves.”

Suddenly the melodious tonals of the Sunheart carillon filled the air, enveloping the City in a cloak of sound that thrilled every listener with its majesty. Banks of light began to appear in the depths far below as the shift glass brightened to admit the last rays. Still visible through the haze off to the darkling east, clusters of Armada scoutcraft were coursing back and forth, track beams on, piercing the night with lances of smoking brilliance.

The brothers Sunheart rose together without another word and passed into the dining hall, leaving the warbot switched to repose faculty, awaiting its activation signal.

Flan looked around the lofty chamber for old Gaul. People were passing to and fro between the food-heaped tables and fluted columns, or dancing gaily past the immense representation of the Sunheart crest, fashioned from ruballoy and synthaflux. The royal banners looked somewhat frayed and faded; indeed, there was a certain air of age, of unwilling antiquity present in the chamber.

He moved through the noisy, laughing crowd. Luminous lips followed, pursing in a smile of sweet mischief when he did not turn around at the call of his name.

The hall overflowed with members of the Court: nobles old and new; plotters; scanners; crises wardens; terrain scientists and cortex projectors; alien entertainers; obese thinkers who could barely move about; gaunt-ribbed dandies; clerics from the four major religious sects and their counterparts – the Hedons and the Grimories; elegant samplers and tasters of life – all masked and gaudy, gathered in their iridescents to pay homage to the Empress, Gela Ineus Sunheart.

The Mords were conspicuous by their absence. There was, thankfully, no touch of austere black about the place.

And here was his mother, pale and ethereally beautiful, like some earthbound spirit, untouched by the years. She stepped down from the dais, the press of people bowing out of her path as she greeted her son in close embrace.

"Happy birthday, Mother..."

"You make it so by being here, my son."

"...and Uncle PEW sends his regards also."

The Empress's laughter was as delicate as soft-falling rain. "I always said you two were the only ones who could stand each other's company. Extend to him my thanks, and inquire as to his – ah. . ."

They looked at each other and smiled.

"Health?" he offered the word, laughing.

"You look a little thin. Have you been taking your daily implant?"

"Yes, Mother – always."

"Flan!" said a vibrant, familiar voice, a voice he had listened in awe to many times in the Hall of Worlds as it issued decrees and weighed strategems, a voice which had reassured and guided him during the hazardous survival maneuvers Below, the first voice to fire his desire to explore those lamps in the nighttime sky.

All around him, people were kneeling; a hush fell over the throng. Turning, Flan beheld his father, Alidin Sunheart, resplendent in the rainbow robes of justice and power. Upon his temple rested the Starcrown, haloing his head in cold light; and against his bosom rested the Sunheart pendant, on which all the others were patterned.

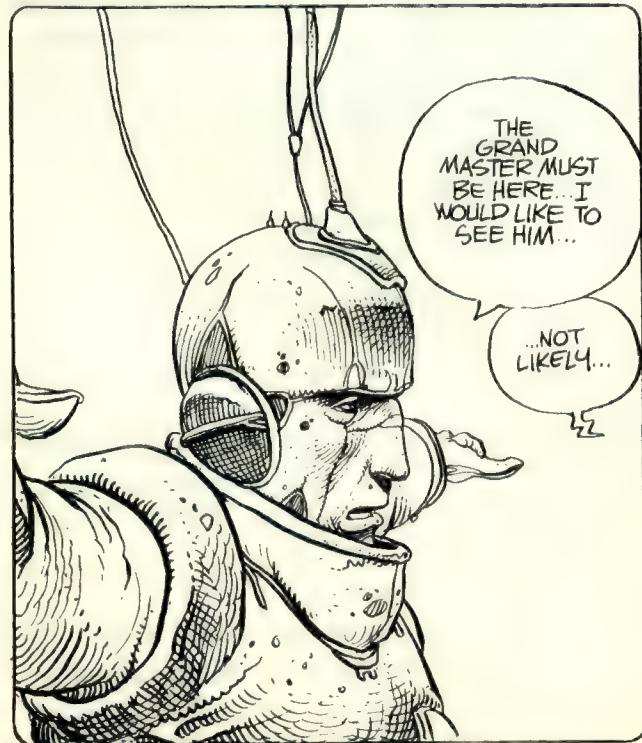

"My Lord, I bow to you."

"Arise, my son, arise! Come with us to the table. Rouyn, Oromocto, clear a way for your brother!"

Muttering to themselves, they did as they were told.

to be continued

EXTERMINATOR II.

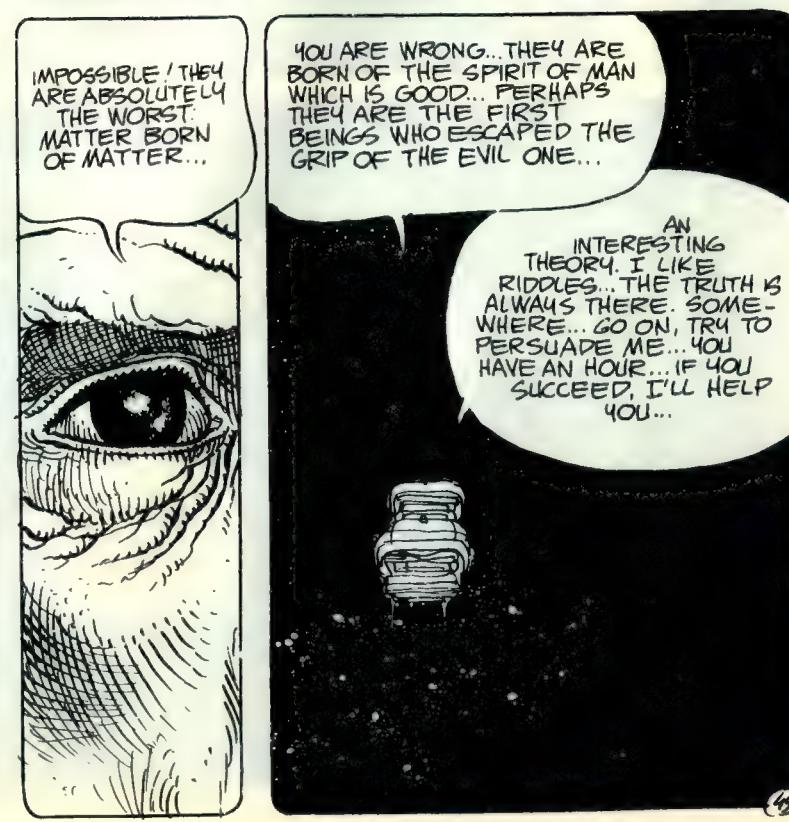

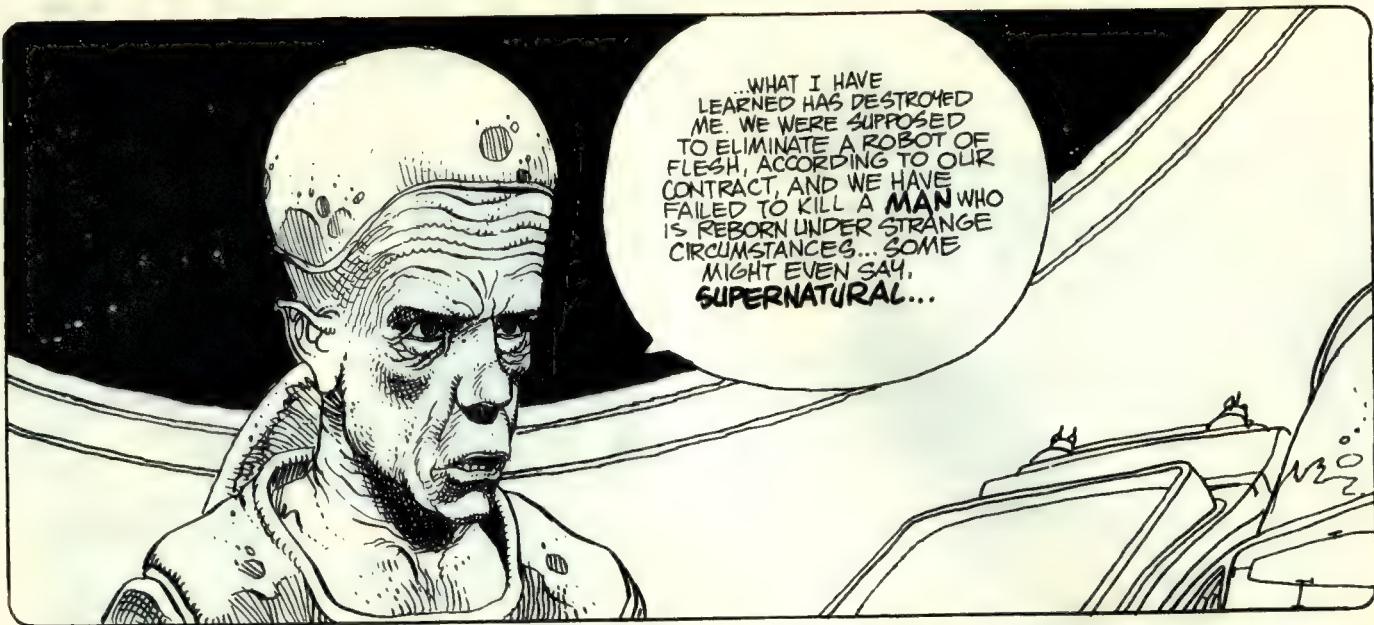

...YOU HAVE BROUGHT UP AN INTERESTING THEOLOGICAL PROBLEM... FOR, IF GOD, OR THE PRINCIPLE OF GOOD, WHATEVER YOU LIKE, CREATED THE SPIRIT, AND IF THE PRINCIPLE OF EVIL CREATED MATTER, THEN THERE IS NO ESCAPE OUTSIDE DEATH...

...BUT WE WOULD PREFER TO SEE THINGS DIFFERENTLY AND CONSIDER THAT THE PLANETS ALONE ARE BAD: THAT HE GAVE THE VOID AS AN ESCAPE... SATISFIED?

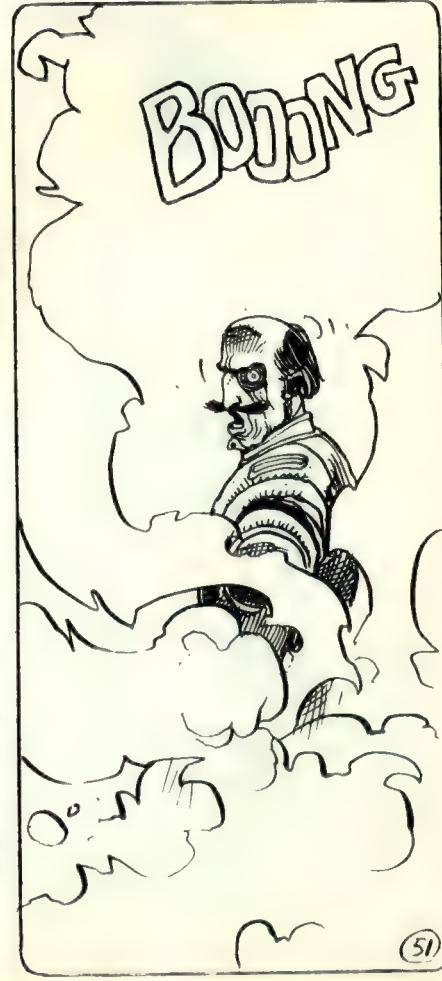

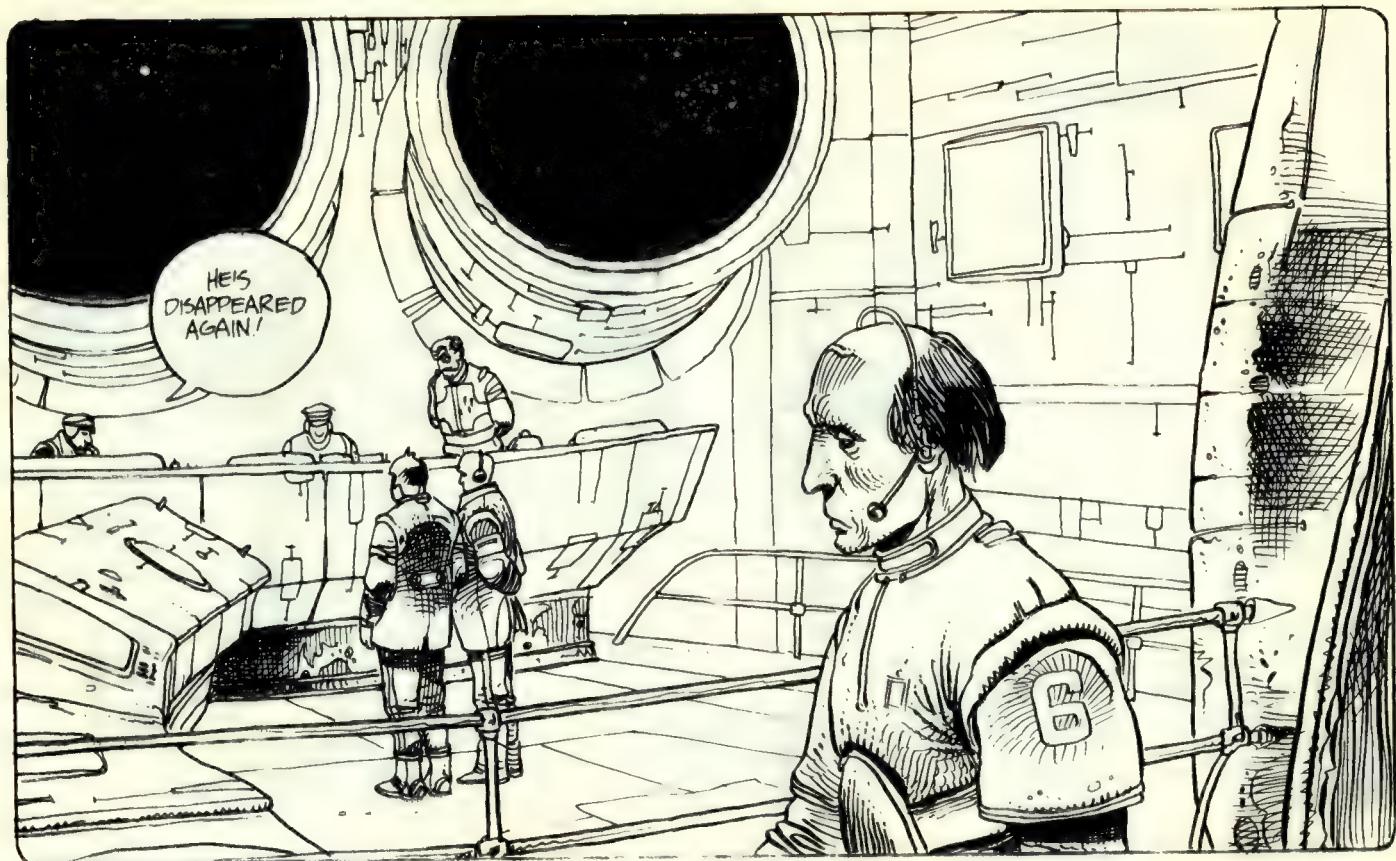

NO, DON'T ANSWER THAT... I KNOW THAT YOU UNDERSTAND OUR RELIGION... I HAVE LEARNED A LOT ABOUT YOU, AND BY VERY DIVERSE MEANS... THERE WAS NO NEED FOR YOU TO BRING UP THAT THEOLOGICAL POINT, FOR, IN TRUTH, I WANTED TO SEE YOU...

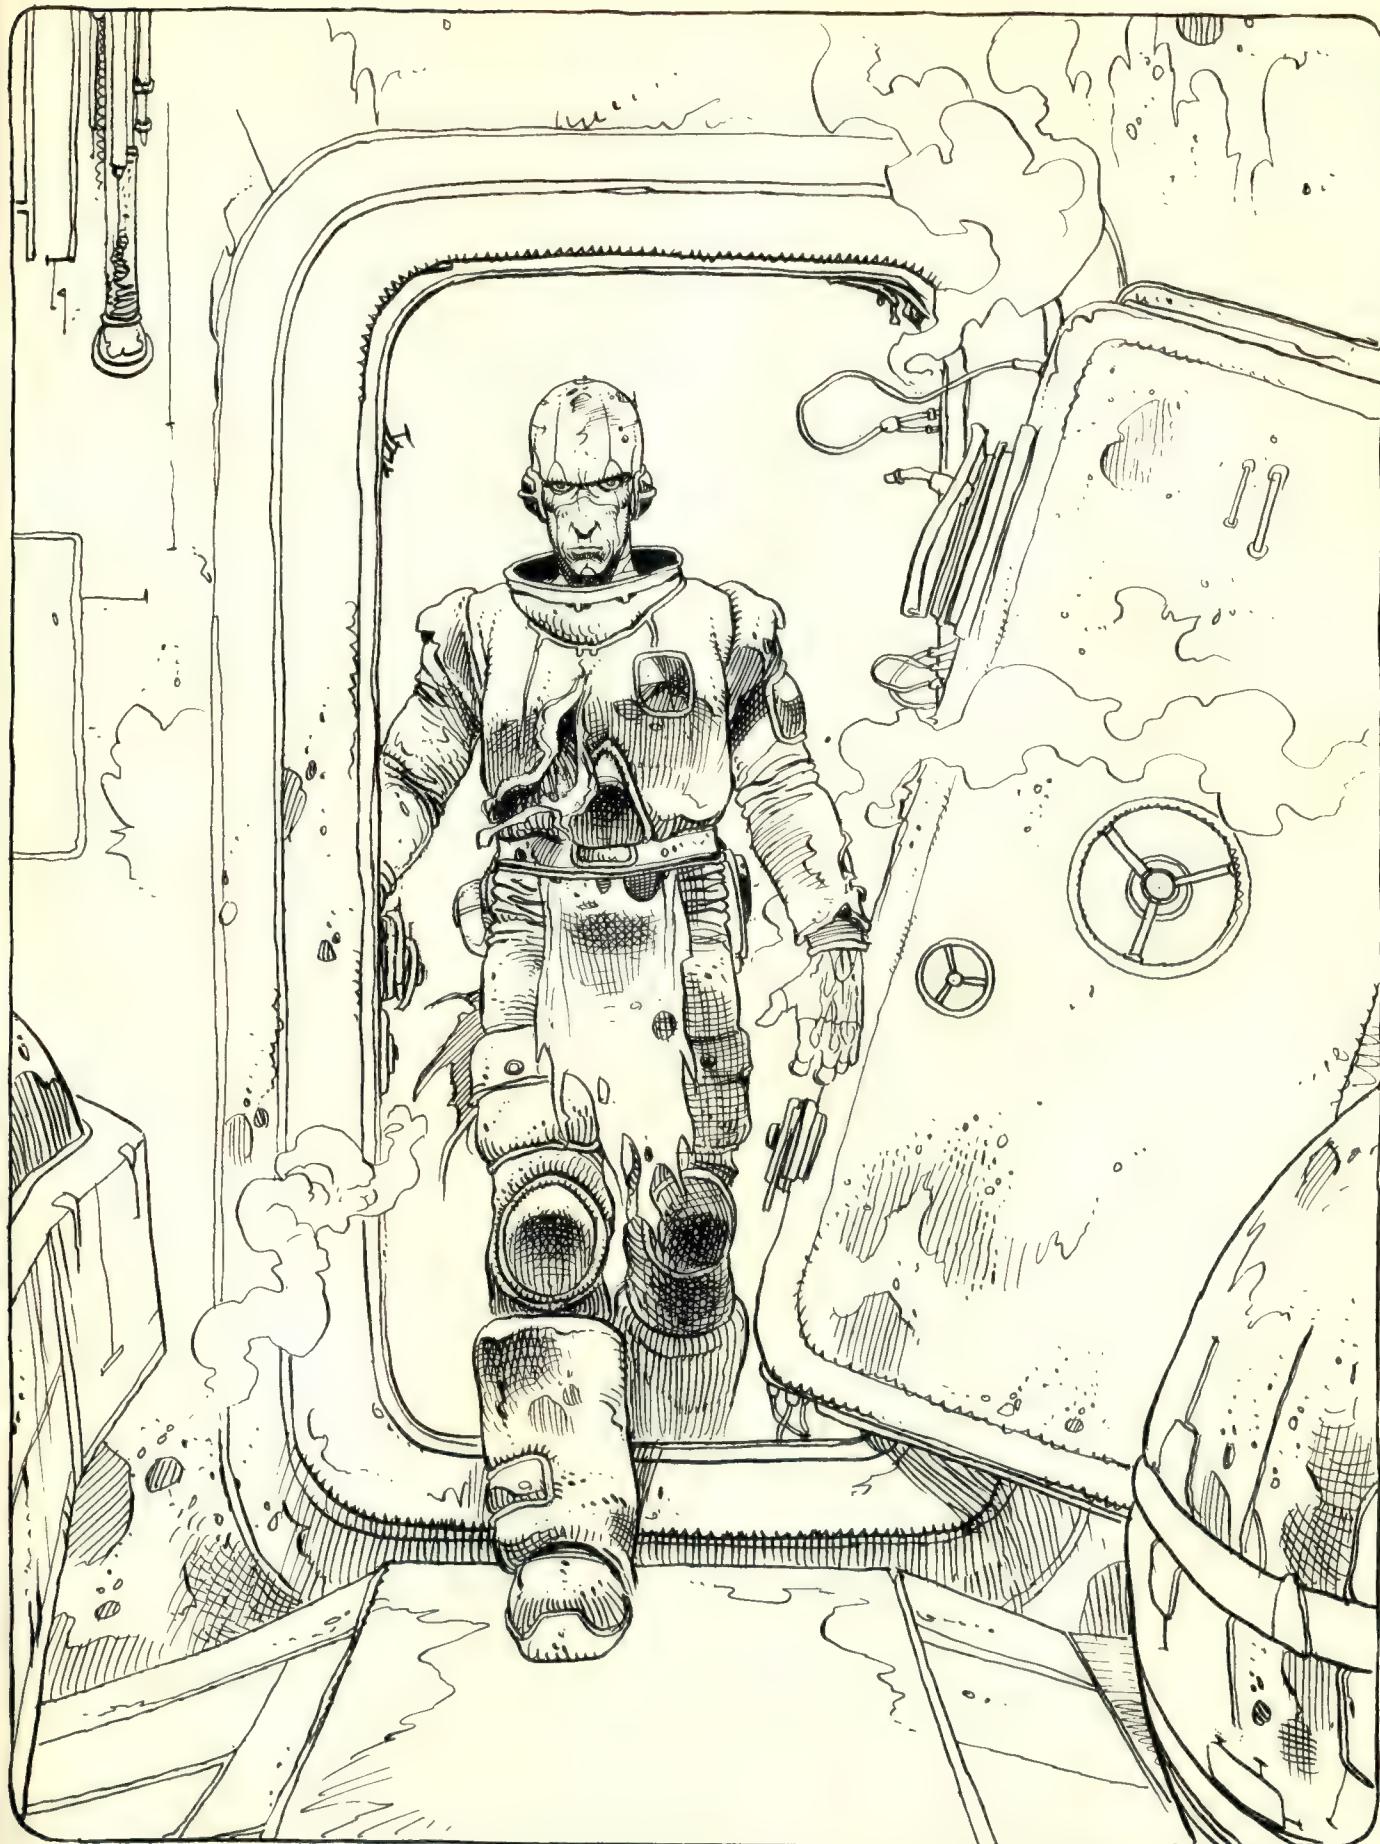

TO TELL YOU THAT YOU ARE FREE...

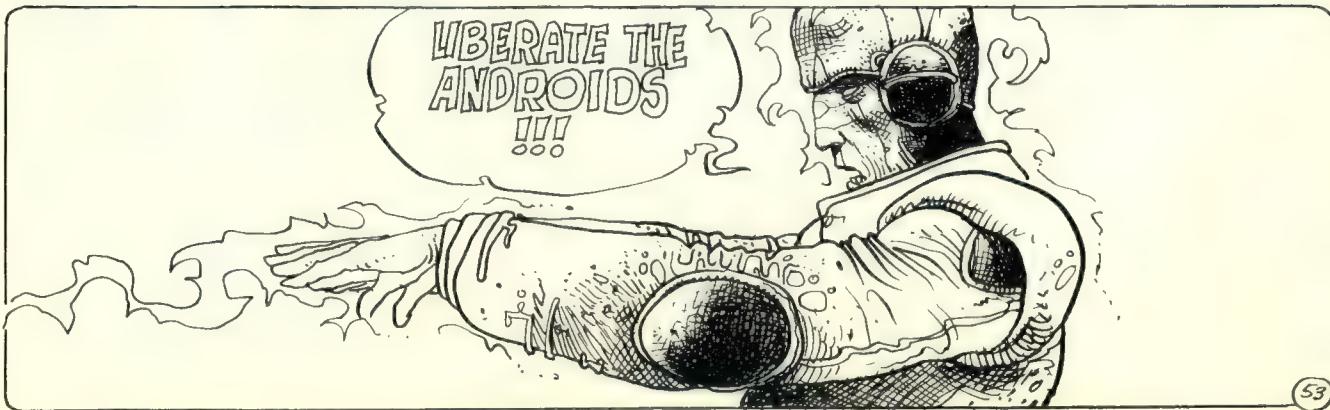

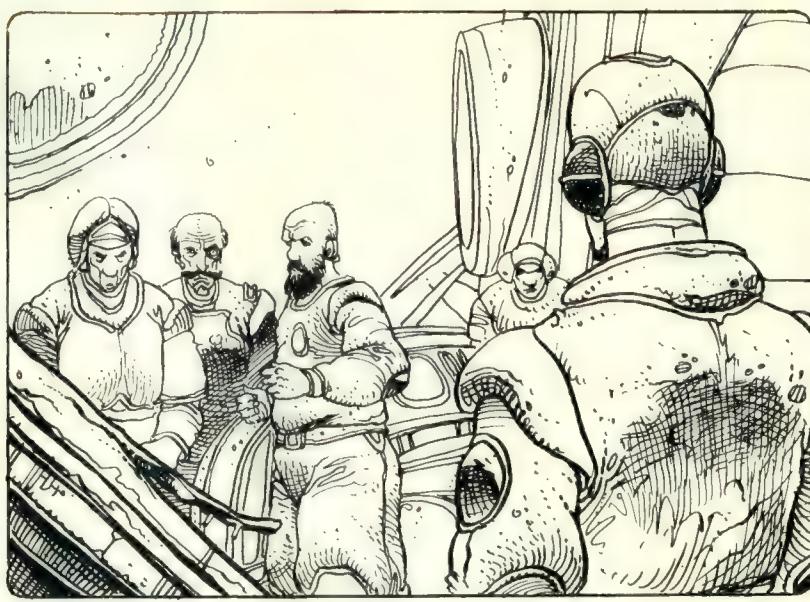

...ON EARTH... ON THE SIXTH LEVEL OF THE GREAT FORTRESS...

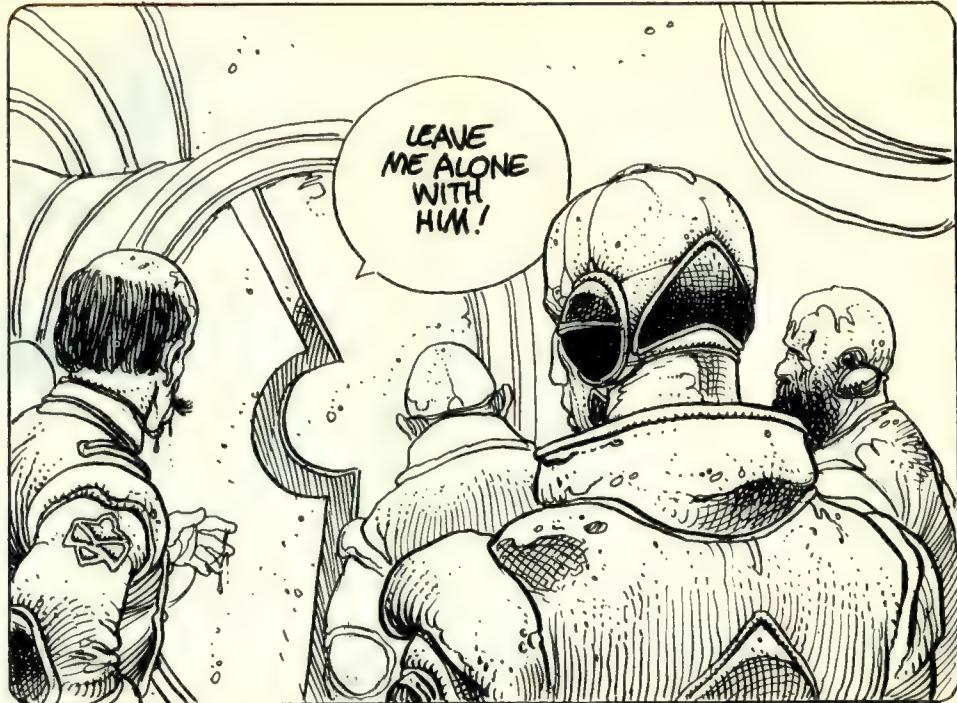

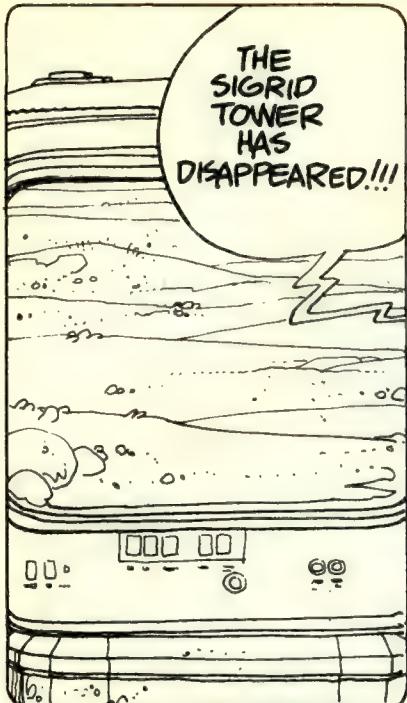

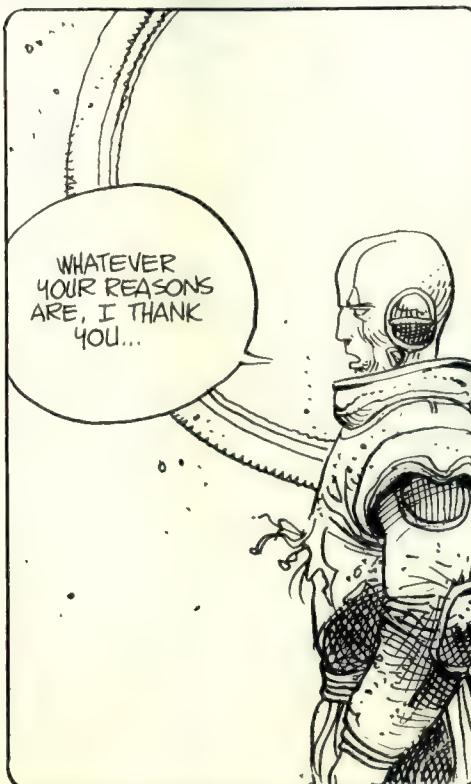

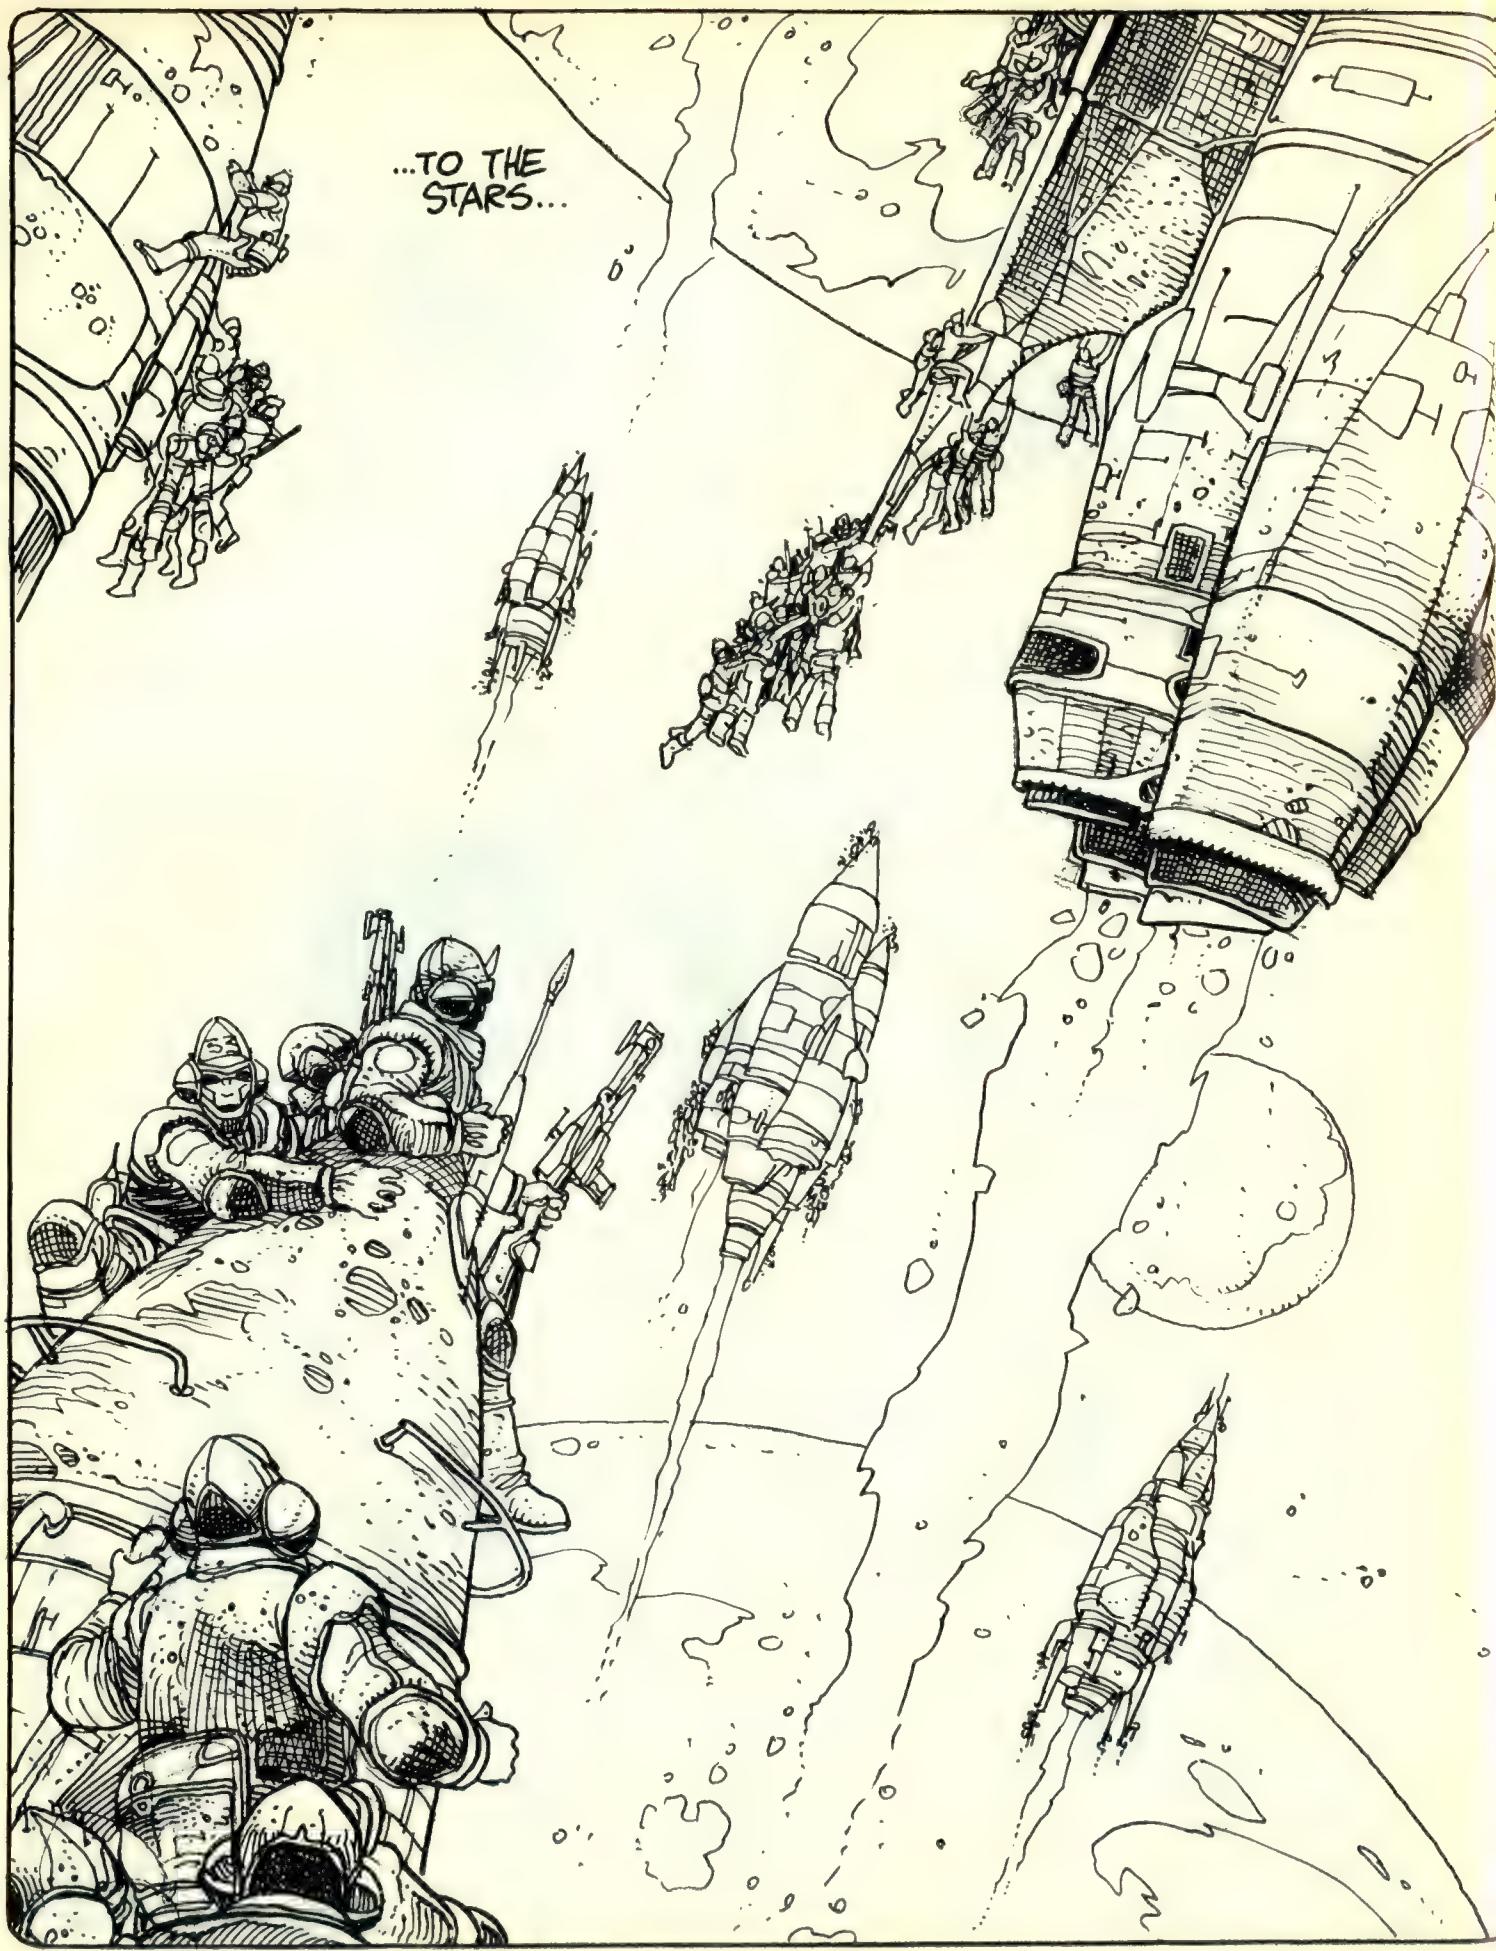

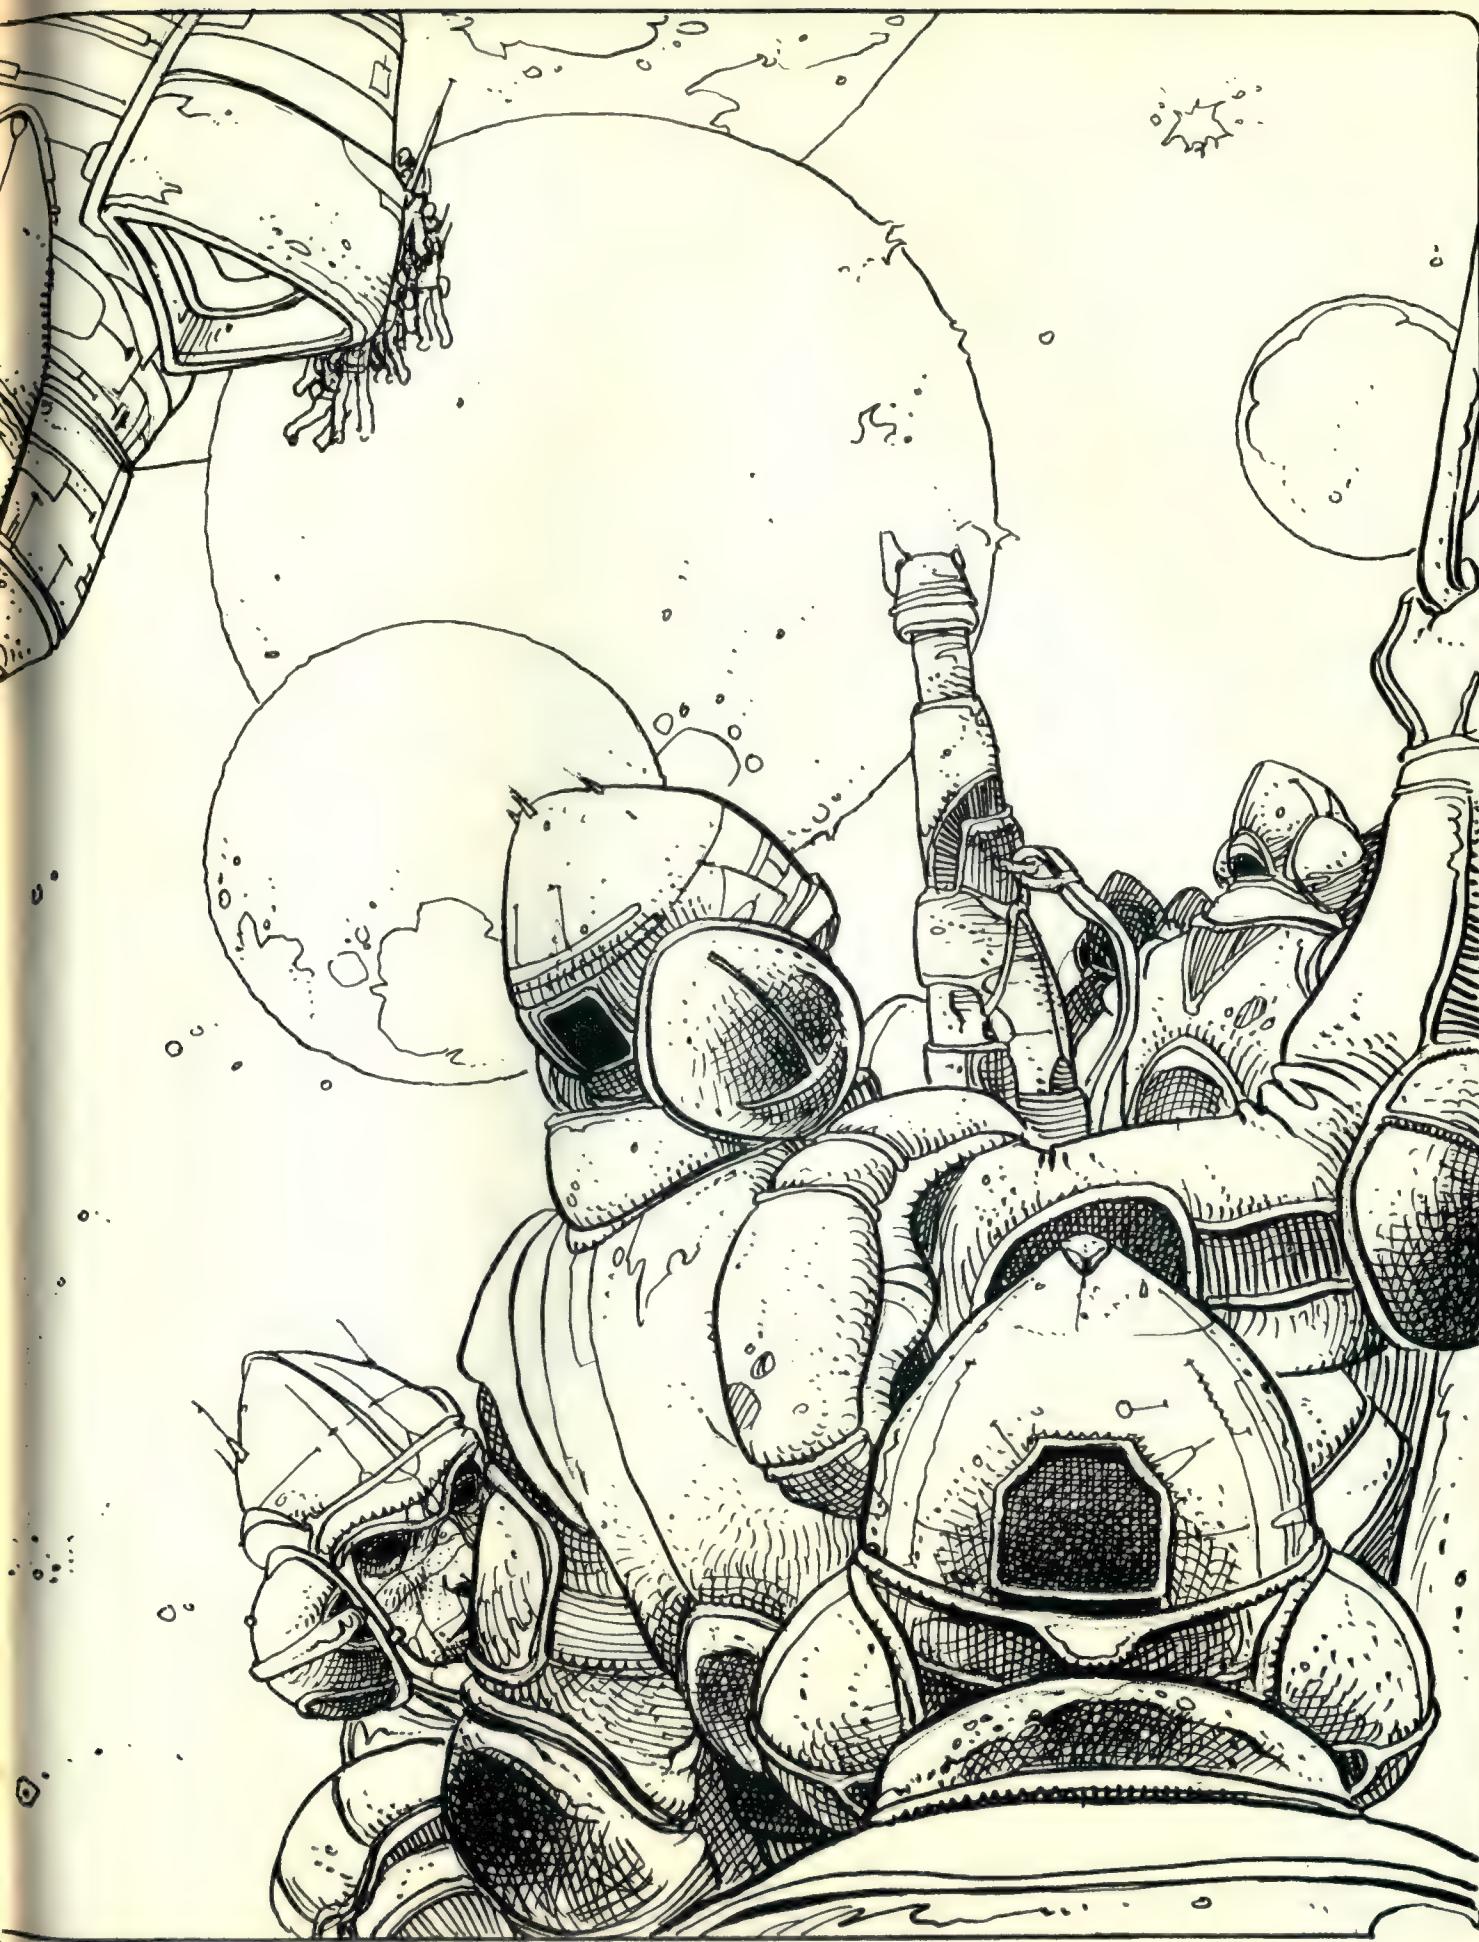

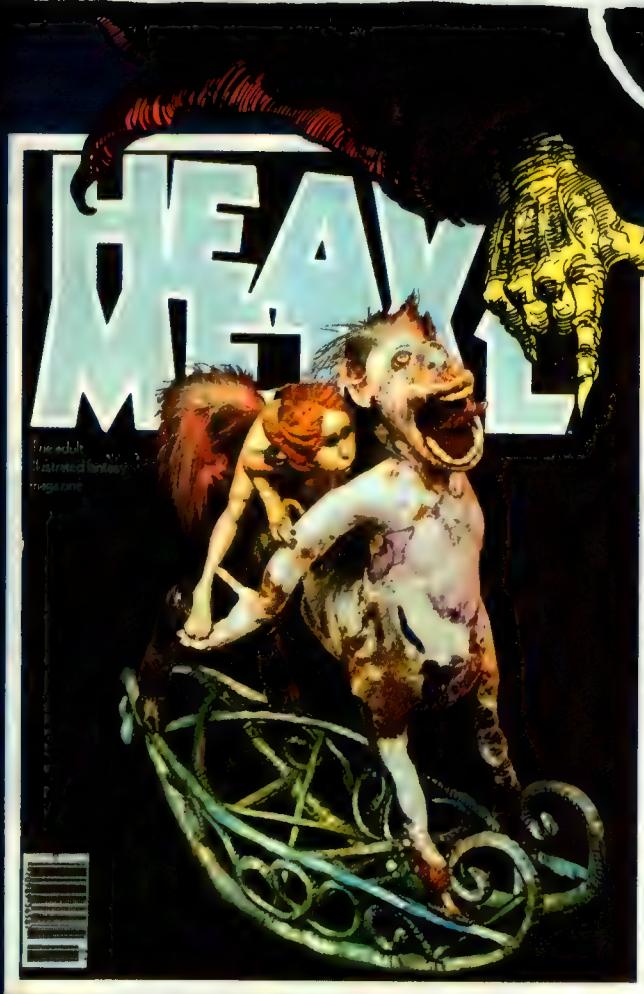

Let Us Transport You...

...to times past and future, to places distant and diverse. A galaxy of luminous illustration and limitless imagination is yours, month after month, in Heavy Metal, the world's most widely read adult science-fiction and fantasy magazine. A subscription offers substantial savings over newsstand prices, and guarantees that you won't miss an issue.

Heavy Metal
The adult illustrated fantasy magazine.

Heavy Metal—635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022

HM379

Yes, I want to be a subscriber to Heavy Metal, the illustrated fantasy magazine. I realize that this subscription entitles me to deduct $8.00 from the subscription prices listed below.

I have enclosed my check or money order.

Charge to my Master Charge # _____

BankAmericard # _____

Bank # _____

Expiration Date _____

month

year

Signature _____

- One year (12 issues)$18.00. Deduct $8.00—you pay $10.00
 Two years (24 issues)$26.00. Deduct $8.00—you pay $18.00
 Three years (36 issues)$33.00. Deduct $8.00—you pay $25.00

Send my subscription to:

NAME: _____

ADDRESS: _____

CITY: _____

STATE: _____

ZIP: _____

All checks must be payable within continental U.S. or Canada. For each year, add $2.50 for Canada, Mexico, and other foreign countries.

COLLECTOR'S ITEMS

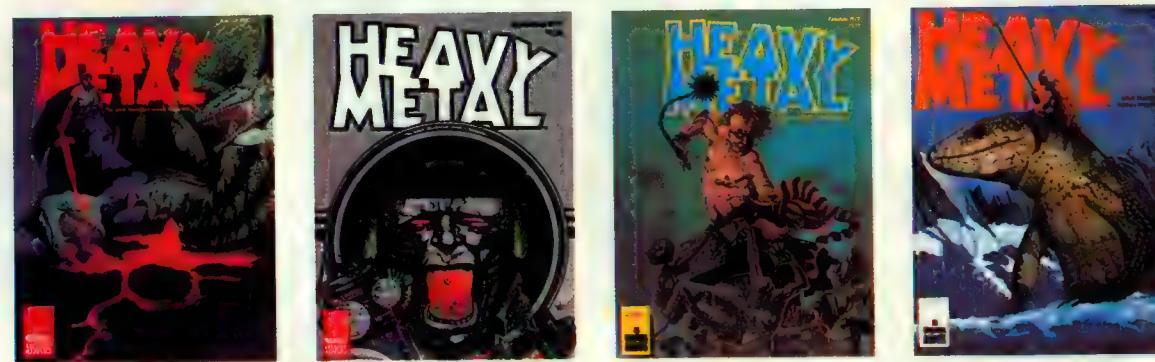

HM #1/APRIL, 1977: With Space Punks, the first chapters of Corben's Den and Bode's Sunpot, an excerpt from the best-selling fantasy novel The Sword of Shannara, Harzak, Sunpot, and more. ($5.00)

HM #2/MAY, 1977: Introducing Roger, the paranoid puppet, Virgo, the cosmic maiden, Russian astronauts, Conquering Armies, the ultimate rock festival, while Harzak, Sunpot, and Den continue. ($4.00)

HM #3/JUNE, 1977: Features Night Images, poetry by Conan's creator, Robert E. Howard, with illustrations by Corben; Macedo's Rockblitz, the highly praised Shells, the first chapter of Davis's World Apart, more Den, Sunpot, and Harzak. ($3.00)

HM #4/JULY, 1977: Is a must for Moebius fans, with 12 pages of Harzak and his s/f spy saga, The Long Tomorrow, also the end of Sunpot, further adventures of Den, the psychic Nep Simo, and the horrible Gold Queen. ($3.00)

HM #5/AUGUST, 1977: In which the saga of Polonus begins, The Long Tomorrow concludes, World Apart and Den continue, all amidst talking plants, samurai, puppets, sex, and violence. ($3.00)

HM #6/SEPTEMBER, 1977: Galactic Aztecs, cosmic cowboys, hysterical shrubbery, chemically-induced sanity, a Moebius space opera, more World Apart, Den, and Polonus, plus a Roger Zelazny short story. ($3.00)

HM #7/OCTOBER, 1977: Packed with knights, ladies, jet pilots, insanity, reincarnation, and other harmless pastimes; 10 pages of color Moebius; the Airtight Garage, Den, and Polonus redux; and fiction by Theodore Sturgeon. ($3.00)

HM #8/NOVEMBER, 1977: With nine color pages by Moebius and Rimbaud, the conclusions of both Polonus and World Apart, ex-pugs, intellectual mollusks, birth and death stars, and a great new Harlan Ellison story—the heaviest Heavy Metal yet! ($3.00)

HM #9/DECEMBER, 1977: This time, went up to 104 pages to bring you the complete saga of Druillet's anti-hero, Vuzz, a chapter from Close Encounters of the Third Kind, and Fortune's Fool by Chaykin and Wein, in addition to full-color contributions from regulars Corben, Macedo, Claveloux, and Moebius. ($3.00)

HM #10/JANUARY, 1978: We got Morrow to illustrate Zelazny, we got Lob and Richard to update Ulysses, we got Meehan to do a Heavy Metal calendar girl, we concluded Conquering Armies, and continued Den. Of course, you knew about the Incas, fog lights, and the time warp. ($3.00)

HM #11/FEBRUARY, 1978: Wherein begin the new adventures of Barbarella, naked to her enemies and nude to her friends, and of Urm the Fool in his quest for revenge. Wraparound cover and center spread by Nino. A trip to Venus, the Crusader and the Witch, and Moebius down the rabbit hole. With the usual unusual, like Den. ($3.00)

HM #12/MARCH, 1978: In which we learn the evils of witch-hunts and the perils of witchcraft, the problems of mass transit, and the dangers of hitchhiking. Plus, the first swashbuckling episode of Orion. More Barbarella. More Urm. And still more Den. ($3.00)

HM #13/APRIL, 1978: Big deal first anniversary issue, with 30-page insert from Paradise 9 by all concerned. Also, amidst the king must die, death's duel, and the undead, Barbarella gives birth. Oh, and the sexual acrobatic epilogue to Den. ($3.00)

HM #14/MAY, 1978: Does in Urm the Mad, locates El Dorado, goes to pieces on a bicycle, buys a cannibal clock, time-travels, and cerebrally tap-dances with Nino. Not to mention Orion and Barbarella. ($3.00)

HM #15/JUNE 1978: This time, we go too far. For instance, the exotic new Corben, Shahrazad, the neurotic, Evolution, the ecstatic, More Than Human, the erotic Barbarella, and the erotic Them Changes. And an excerpt from Sabre, and the origins of Hellman... ($3.00)

HM #16/JULY, 1978: A happy ending to Barbarella, a sad ending to 1996, the resumption of Druillet's Gail, the further adventures of Hellman and Orion, More Than Human cont'd, and another piece of the Arabian Nights tale from Corben: ($2.00)

HM #17/AUGUST, 1978: Looks like more of the same, with Onon, Corben's Arabian Nights, Hellman, and the last More Than Human. Except Druillet's Gail gets going again, the Off-Season starts, cannibal robots get involved, and somebody finally touches the right button. ($2.00)

HM #18/SEPTEMBER, 1978: Starring Sindbad the Sailor, Esorel, Queen of the Bubble Women, the Major's fiancée, two off-season detectives, Arcane the Warrior, Hellman, Orion, and Lone Sloane on Gail Harlan Ellison's sewer full of babies. Plus miscellaneous gags and wheezes. ($2.00)

HM #19/OCTOBER, 1978: All Hallows breaks loose with an excerpt from Dawn of the Dead, the puberty rites of dragons, a zombie android called Exterminator, Ellison's Glass Goblin Illustrated, and the onset of McKie's So Beautiful and So Dangerous. More eerie exploits of heros Sindbad, Gail, and Orion. ($2.00)

HM #20/NOVEMBER, 1978: A full 20-page excerpt from the Chaykin/Delany Empire, while Sindbad's dragon explodes, the Exterminator escapes, Sloane makes war, the Sad Man disappears, Grubert arrives too late, and Hellman is reborn for the final time. So Beautiful, So Dangerous, part two, and more Diabolical Planet. ($2.00)

HM #21/DECEMBER, 1978: Putting the Easter bunny back into Xmas, and wrapping up Orion and Off-Season; with sinister Tarot greeting cards, wreaths and wraiths, creches, crashes, and a prezzy for you—a 12-page Moebius murder yarn. ($2.00)

HM #22/JANUARY, 1979: This one's full of elephants, for some reason. Plus our first Trina, and a pinup, and Gail's shoot-em-up finale. Some decapitation, a space siren, and the android takes over the ship. More McKie and Corben. Whattaya want? ($2.00)

HM #23/FEBRUARY, 1979: Our February fantasies feature the onset of the tale of the Star-crown. We continue with Sindbad and McKie's So Beautiful and So Dangerous. More Moebius and Bilal. Maceo brings us chapter four of life in Metropolis 5; and, by popular demand, Galactic Geographic. There's the story of a star-nosed mole and much, much more. ($2.00)

Please send me the following:

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____
Zip _____

Issue	Price	No. of copies
Oct. 1978	$2.00	_____
Nov. 1978	$2.00	_____
Dec. 1978	$2.00	_____
Jan. 1979	$2.00	_____
Feb. 1979	$2.00	_____
Binder	$5.50	_____
Binder with 1978 Issues	$2.00	_____

I enclose a total of $ _____
This amount covers purchase plus shipping and handling. All issues are mailed in protective covering.

If you do not wish to cut the coupon in this ad, but do wish to order, please print or type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.

HEAVY METAL
Dept. HM 379
635 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10022

Heavy Metal Previews the Sci-Fi Film of the Year!

ALIEN

In April
A spectacular portfolio of drawings and designs for the most dazzling fantasy film since Star Wars!

In May
Beginning a three-part serialization Alien: The Illustrated Story by the award-winning team of Archie Goodwin and Walt Simonson!

Watch for Alien

A Brandywine-Ronald Shusett production
Produced by Gordon Carroll and David Giler
Directed by Ridley Scott
Screenplay by Dan O'Bannon, Walter Hill, and David Giler
Story by Dan O'Bannon and Ronald Shusett
From Twentieth Century Fox

Chain Mail

Dear Heavies:

No doubt you are by now the proud recipients of mail (parcels?) varying from praise, to outrage, to submissions. Allow me to outline an experience directly related to your magazine.

Against all odds, I've been trying to get it on with a young woman, whom I'll call Marie. She is an artist in her spare time. I, figuring the time was right to reveal about twenty facets of myself via the pages of Heavy Metal, showed her an issue, one with a lady on the cover. Thumbing through it quickly, she only caught glimpses of "Evolution," "Heilman," and

"Barbarella."

"John, do you really like this?"

"Yes, very much."

"It's an X-rated comic book!"

"Marie, I've never viewed it in that light."

"But, look at it! Sex is all you see!" (That's the point where my mind raced through the many months of "Chain Mail"...and the letters from the feminists. Yup, Marie was into the women's movement.)

"Marie, look at this...Galactic Geographic is a mindbender...and a story by Ted Sturgeon." A cold gaze tipped me off that Marie wasn't particularly into S.F., either.

Did I say artist before? Nay, the girl's a painter, perhaps, but no artist. A mind so closed betrays itself. The girl is now convinced that I'm a pervert, and...

You know, with a Kelly on the Editorial staff, I'm surprised I'm not seeing more Irish fantasy material. (Intergalactic potatoes??)

John R. Calen
Holtsville, N.Y.

Dear Editors:

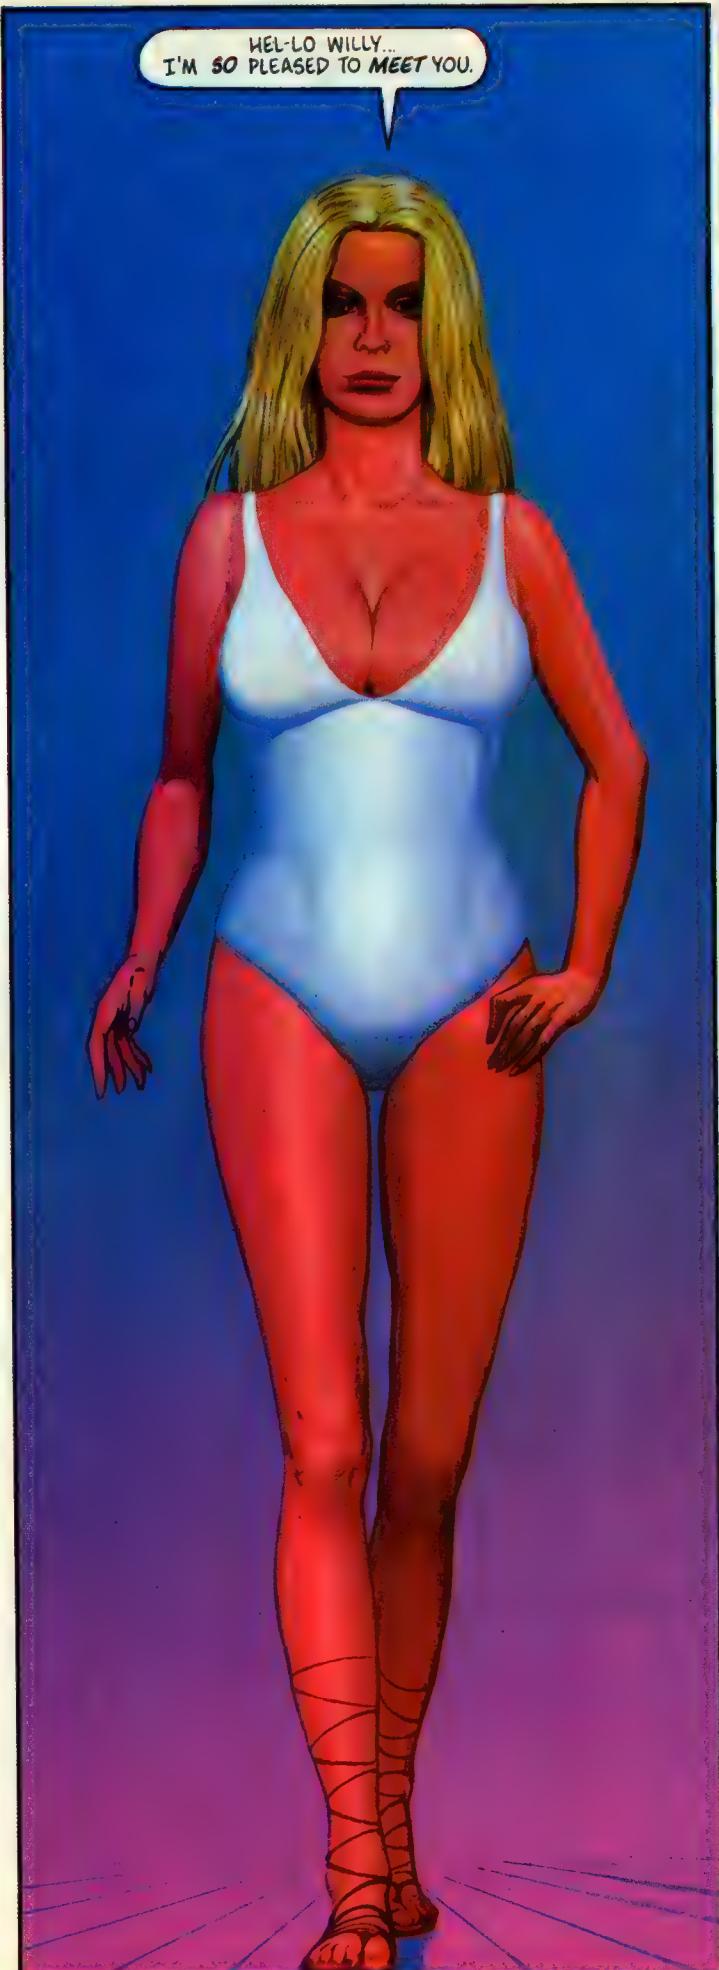

You're right! Theodore Sturgeon certainly is more than human. I liked the story so much, I immediately ran out and bought the book. Thank you, oh thank you for exposing such a wonderful tale! Wise choice!

Bill Fack
Westfield, N.J.

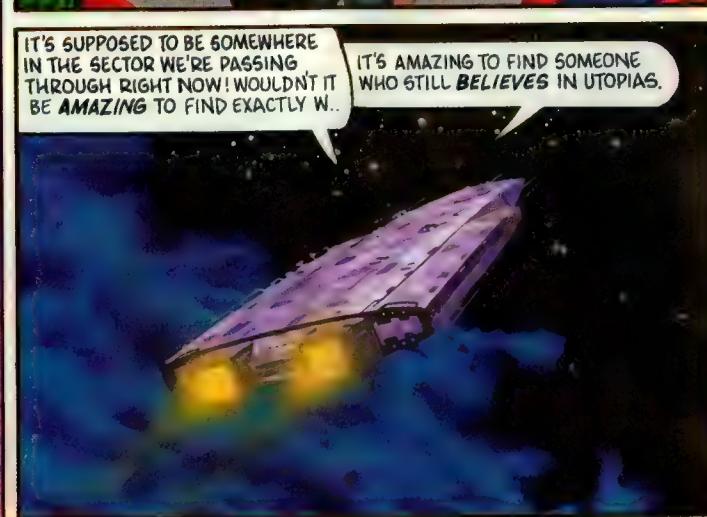

SO BEAUTIFUL AND SO DANGEROUS

EPISODE VI - HOPE IS A GOOD BREAKFAST AND A BAD SUPPER ...

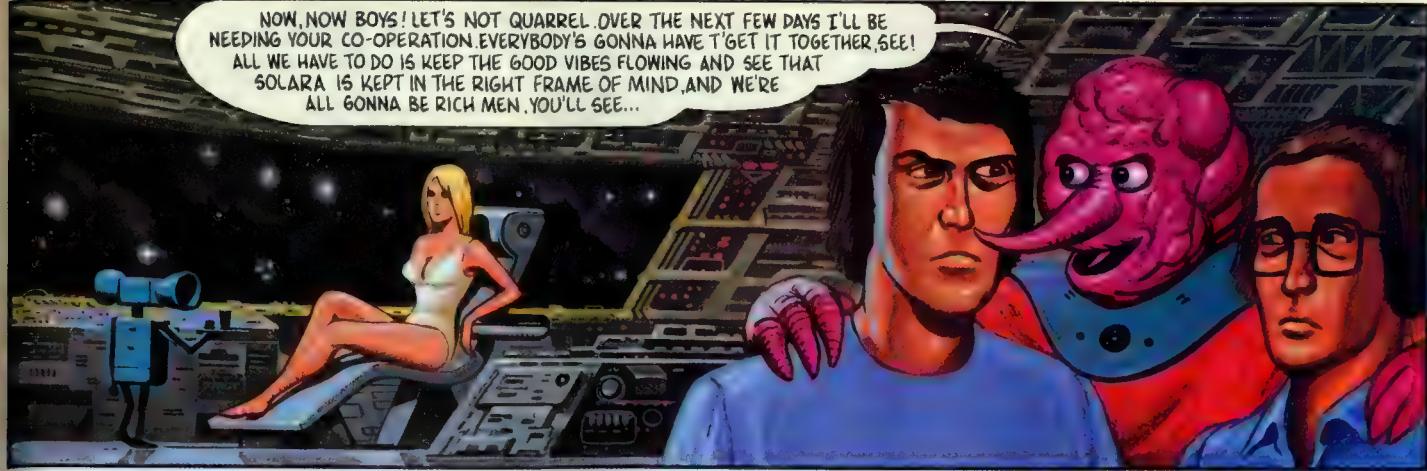

EASY BOYS, EASY! SOLARA'S A SENSITIVE, SHE CAN TUNE IN TO THEM OL' COSMIC WAVES... YESSIREE... FROM WAY DOWN IN THE INFRA-RED TO WAY UP IN THE ULTRA-VIOLET.

NOW, NOW BOYS! LET'S NOT QUARREL OVER THE NEXT FEW DAYS I'LL BE NEEDING YOUR CO-OPERATION. EVERYBODY'S GONNA HAVE T'GET IT TOGETHER, SEE!
ALL WE HAVE TO DO IS KEEP THE GOOD VIBES FLOWING AND SEE THAT SOLARA IS KEPT IN THE RIGHT FRAME OF MIND, AND WE'RE ALL GONNA BE RICH MEN, YOU'LL SEE...

OH WILLY DEAR, I THINK ANOTHER CHOCOLATE MILK SUNDAE WOULD JUST PUT ME IN EXACTLY THE CORRECT MENTAL ATTITUDE TO RECEIVE THE COSMIC RAYS TONIGHT.

AND STEVE, DARLING, A HOT WATER BOTTLE IN MY BED WOULD REALLY MAXIMIZE MY RECEPTIVE CAPABILITIES...

GO ON, THEN YOU GUYS... MOVE IT!

Y'KNOW SUSAN, THE TROUBLE WITH SENSITIVES IS THAT THEY'RE SO-O SENSITIVE! THE LEAST LITTLE THING UPSET THEM.

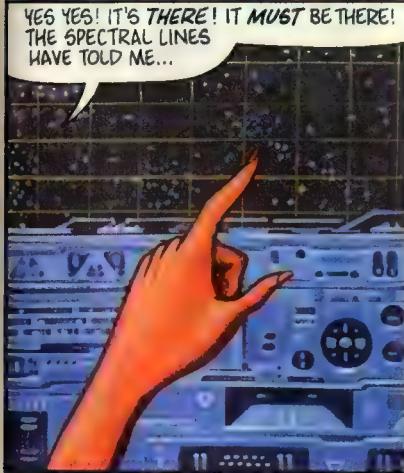

YES YES! IT'S THERE! IT MUST BE THERE! THE SPECTRAL LINES HAVE TOLD ME...

SURE I'M SURE! THERE'S ABSOLUTELY NOTHIN' HERE BARPO!

BALLS!

THERE! IT'S THERE! I'M ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN THIS TIME

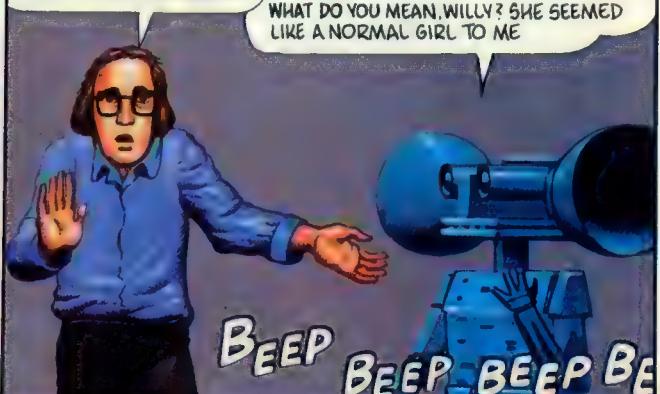

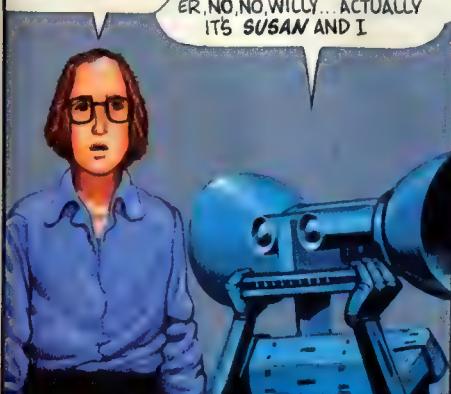

WHAT'S WRONG, TITAN? YOU'VE BEEN LOOKING A BIT DOWN LATELY, NOT THAT I SEE YOU GRINNING MUCH, BUT ER... IS THIS UTOPIA BUSINESS GETTING ON TOP OF YOU?

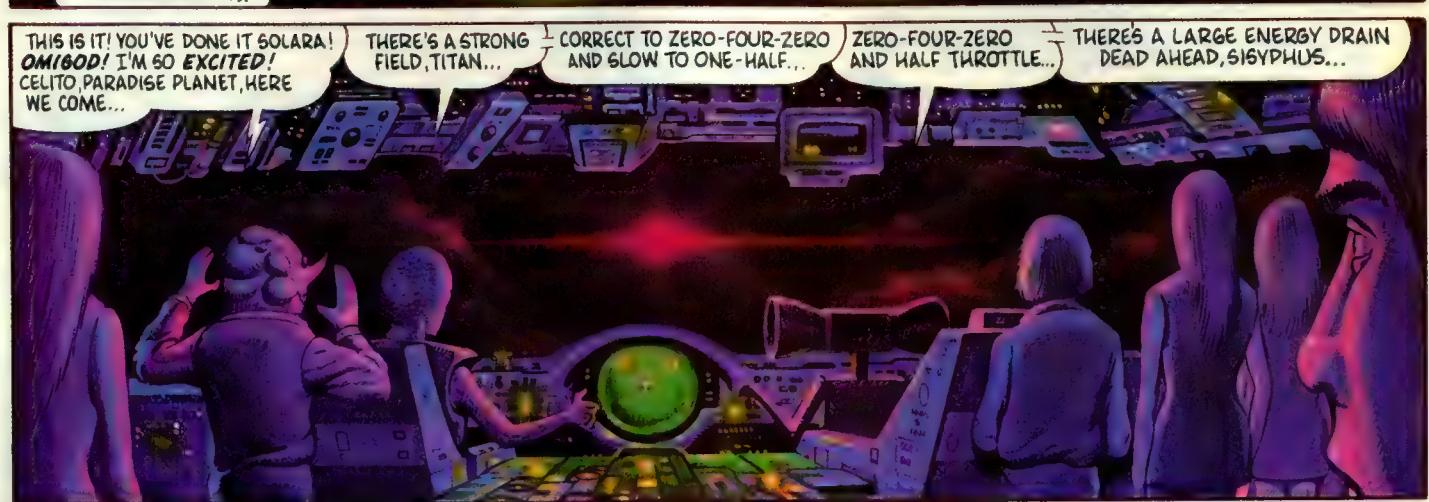

ER, NO, NO, WILLY... ACTUALLY IT'S SUSAN AND I

IT'S ALL OVER, WILLY!
IT'S ALL OVER! OH GOD!
HOW CAN I GO ON COMPUTING
WITHOUT HER?!

WE-ELL, TITAN, I MEAN... YOU KNOW... I'M SURE YOU BOTH WENT INTO THIS THING WITH YOUR EYES OPEN. THERE WERE LOTS OF... ER... DIFFERENCES DON'T YOU THINK YOUR RELATIONSHIP WITH SUSAN WAS A LITTLE... A LITTLE, ER... UNUSUAL

WHAT DO YOU MEAN, WILLY? SHE SEEMED LIKE A NORMAL GIRL TO ME

PARADISE! JUST LIKE I ALWAYS IMAGINED IT!

ISN'T IT
JUST SO
SUBLIME,
BARPO

SURE IS! CAN YOU IMAGINE
THE PROFITS A HOLIDAY
CAMP HERE WOULD TAKE!

Y'KNOW WILLY, THIS IS LIKE A DREAM COME TRUE.

YEAH, I KNOW. THAT'S WHAT'S WORRYING ME...

STEVE...
YEAH, WILLY...

HAVE YOU EVER HAD THAT FEELING
YOU'RE BEING WATCHED ...?

THUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUMMMMM

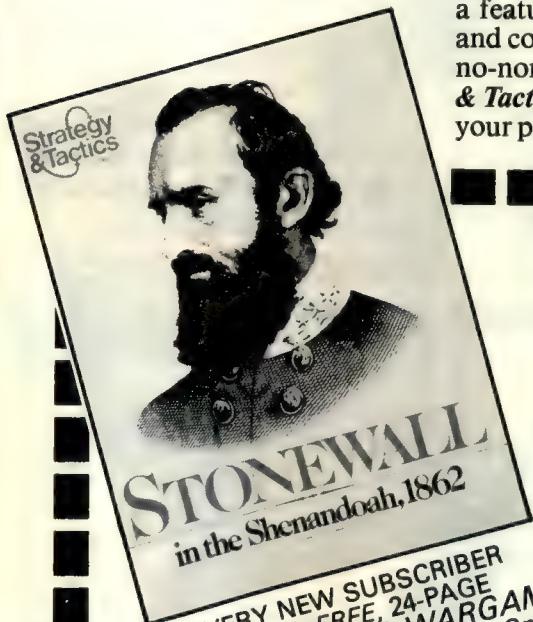

TO BE CONTINUED

Strategy & Tactics gives you the power to decide.

Now you can stand on the great battlefields of the past and the present, to change or challenge the tide of history. It's rare that we're offered the opportunity to use the full power of our intellect and decision-making ability — Strategy & Tactics Magazine gives you one of those rare chances through the informative and thought-provoking medium of conflict simulation.

Conflict simulations are as new as computer modeling and as old as chess. They present, in "game" form, intriguing re-creations of historical and hypothetical battles to be played out on specially designed maps with pieces that represent the actual forces involved. Every two months Strategy & Tactics brings you a complete conflict simulation game accompanied by a feature length article on the same subject. In addition, other historical and contemporary military and political subjects are treated in a data-rich, no-nonsense manner supported by clear and attractive graphics. Strategy & Tactics is a game and a magazine ... and a fascinating new way to flex your powers of decision. Subscribe today.

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER
GETS A FREE, 24-PAGE
INTRODUCTION TO WARGAMING
Plus — a FREE Strike Force One Introductory Game!

SPI has been serving customers by mail since 1970

Send check or money order to:

SPI

Dept. 1022

44 East 23rd Street, New York, N.Y. 10010

*Please enter my subscription to Strategy & Tactics for:*

1 year (six issues) $15 2 years (12 issues) $28 Single issue $5

Also send me the following SPI games, recommended for new players:

- Blue & Gray, four Civil War battles: $12
- Napoleon's Last Battles, four battles of Waterloo: $12
- Modern Battles II, four contemporary conflicts: $12

name

street apt #

city

state

zip

SPACE BELOW FOR OFFICE USE ONLY:

cc

total credit

post

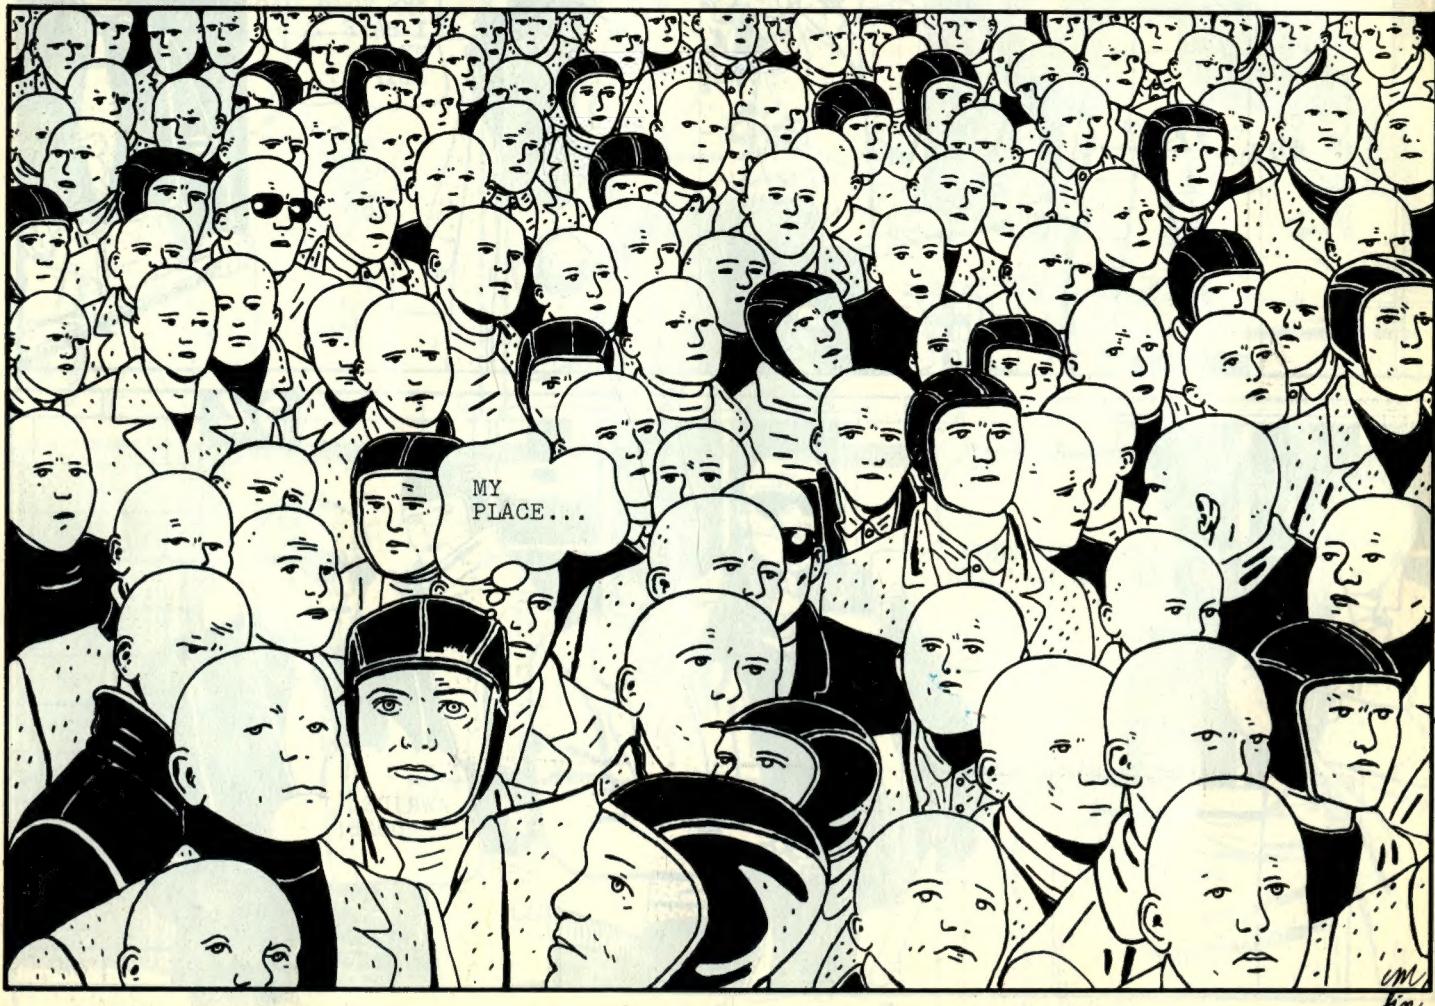

tax

1996

CM.

The Heavy Metal T-shirt. A knockout.

Proven best in inter-galactic tests, Heavy Metal T-shirts of 100% cotton outlasted metallic fibers, 6y x⁹. French-cut sleeves allow full mobility in any gravitational field. Bold Heavy Metal logo, flocked to the thickness of fine industrial carpeting, stands out in the darkest regions of time and/or space.

Available on Planet Earth only by mail from Heavy Metal. Black or red, small, medium, or large. Six dollars each, plus sixty cents for postage and handling.

The Heavy Metal T-shirt. A winner, by a knockout.

HEAVY METAL

DEPT. HM379
635 Madison Ave.
New York, N.Y. 10022

If you do not wish to cut the coupon in this ad, but do wish to order, please print or type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.

Enclosed please find my check or money order. Please send me _____ Heavy Metal T-shirt(s) at $6.00 plus 60¢ per shirt.

Black M L
Red M L

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Mollo